Five Are Great
Exit Mrs. Lot
Two Fine Frenchmen
Ber'in's Flaming Youth

—By Arthur Brisbane—

EMIL LUDWIG, whose biographies of Napoleon and Bismarck are popular, has chosen for the "Four Great Americans" Edison, Jane Addams, Rockefeller, Orville Wright, and is looking for a fifth. He will select Henry Ford if he is as intelligent as his books sound. "Greatness" is hard to define. Edison and Ford are the two most useful Americans, with perhaps one exception. Edison supplied light; Ford distributed 15,000,000 gasoline wagons to ride around in the light, setting the country free from the law of gravitation.

The exception would be John D. Rockefeller. History may call him the most useful American. He has proved that competition is not economical, efficient or necessary, killing a most harmful economic superstition.

Lot's wife looked back, although told not to, and was changed to a pillar of salt. A column of salt near the Dead Sea, called formerly Lot's wife, is now to be abolished by cold-hearted British owners of a cession to work Dead Sea deposits.

Once that column of salt was taken most seriously. Irenaeus, the martyr, vouched for its genuineness and believed "that the soul of Lot's wife still lingered in the statue, giving it sort of organic life."

Andrew D. White, once president of Cornell University, wrote about that.

Many religions have similar traditions. Mecca, to which good Mohammedans go on pilgrimage, shows the Black Stone of the Caaba from which Mohammed rose to Heaven. An angel, warned by the Almighty to keep Adam away from the forbidden fruit, neglected his duty and was changed to stone.

Tradition made Mrs. Lot's salt stains unusual. Rain could not wash away the salt, wind could not overthrow the pillar and any wound made in the lady of salt was instantly and miraculously healed.

Costes and Lebrix, French fliers recently received by President Coolidge, deserve the admiration of this country and of the world.

In 212 hours 57 minutes actual flying time they have covered 32,442 miles. Their average flying speed was nearly 30 miles an hour faster than Col. Lindbergh's.

TRACE OIL BONDS TO G.O.P.,

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., testified today in the new Teapot Dome investigation, with negative results, and the committee turned from him to Will H. Hays, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, who will be asked about campaign fund contributions of Harry F. Sinclair.

The committee decided to "invite" Hays here next week on the basis of a report by an investigator that $25,000 in bonds of the Continental Trading Company had been used to pay off certain loans on behalf of the Republican National Committee in 1923.

Mr. Rockefeller's testimony failed to show the disposition of the bonds of the Continental, which made huge profits in American oil, a part of which the Government contends was sent to Albert B. Fall after the lease of Teapot Dome.

In calling Hays, the committee will go into the political phase of the oil mystery, which has heretofore been constantly in the background for occasional casual questions asked of witnesses.

Two other witnesses today, C. S. Howard and A. W. Rice, of the

SANDINO FLEEING FROM NICARAGUA, U. S. IS TOLD

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Navy Department has been told in reports from Nicaragua that Augusto Sandino, rebel chief, is in flight to Honduras.

A message from officers in Nicaragua received today and given to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Secretary Wilbur declared that Sandino was practically out of ammunition and "insofar as Nicaragua is concerned he is finished and is simply trying to escape."

MR. FOX COMES TO CITY AND NOW HE'S IN ZOO

Cries of "Yoicks," "Tallyho" and "Stole Away" resounded through Franklin st. today as a real fox hunt, probably the first of its kind, took place in the heart of the business section.

Policemen, workmen and early morning commuters took part in the hunt, and "Bre'r Fox" was finally run to earth under a pile of lumber at the corner of Broad and Franklin sts.

The animal's appearance in the city was a mystery, but he is now an inmate of the Franklin Park Zoo, where his captors, Patrolmen Luke

Cleveland, Feb. 11 (AP)—Vitriolic guns were trained upon the Nicaraguan policy of the Washington Government by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, here today, before the City Club.

Recent American activities in the little republic have constituted "a war waged privately by Calvin Coolidge in defiance of the Constitution, without the consent of Congress or approval of the American people," Wheeler charged.

NEAL GAVE WARNING OF OIL DISASTER

The death toll in the Beacon Oil Company explosion in Everett mounted today to 14. It is feared the total may eventually reach 20, for several of the 33 men lying injured in various hospitals are near death.

Nine bodies were taken from the wreckage left by the explosion and fire. Three of the injured victims died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

One other body has been sighted wedged deep in the ruins, and still another body remains unrecovered, according to the authorities, although the company reports that no employes are missing.

At the request of District Attorney Bushnell of Middlesex County, President Samuel W. Stratton of Massachusetts Institute of Technology assigned an expert to investigate and ascertain the cause of the explosion.

With due care the fatal blast could have been prevented, State Fire Marshal Neal asserted.

Altogether, three official investigations are under way.

COMB HUB FOR 'CHINK' IN SECOND FEUD KILLING

A possible connection between a recent fight in a Back Bay night club and the slaying of Louis U. Tucker, 38, of Hemenway st., shot down at Tremont and West Brookline sts., early today, was being investigated by the police.

In the meantime, Sergt. Arthur Timmins of Division 5 applied in Municipal Court for a warrant charging Charles Sherman, alias "The Chink," of New York, with the murder of Tucker.

After obtaining the warrant, which was granted shortly, Timmins and Special Officer Kiernan left for New York, where they have reason to believe Sherman may be found.

Sherman was named by Nicholas Tucker, brother of the slain man, who had given his blood in City Hospital in a vain effort to save Louis' life.

Tucker was dropped by a burst of fire from the gun of a man who sat in a parked automobile, and who made his escape after emptying his weapon.

Police are investigating the theory that the shooting resulted from the row in a night club. At and there will be an inquest over the dead. Besides District Attorney Bushnell and Fire Marshal Neal, Mayor Roche of Everett is making an inquiry.

"Some day, when the wind is right, there will be a huge fire and the whole city of Everett will be destroyed," said Fire Marshal Neal, who was considerably aroused by the tragedy.

"I warned them they would burn the city down if they did not exercise the greatest care, but I guess they did not believe what I said. People get careless when there is so much business going on."

He said the company gave assurance of safety, and he did not think the explosion due to criminal negligence. He said the company never should have been permitted to locate in Everett. The permit was granted in 1900.

The fire marshal was asked today to stop the company doing business at the plant where the fatal explosion occurred. The same petitioners asked this five years ago, he explained, and he added that he did not think it possible to force the company to move.

"But the explosion never should have occurred," he asserted. One of his inspectors, Edward Horrigan, visited the scene, made an inspection and returned to the State House to report.

TECH MAN IN PROBE

A Technology expert, Prof. Ward, accompanied Asst. Dist. Atty. Richard McCabe to Everett, obtained passes to enter the grounds and began their investigation. Nobody without passes was allowed inside the grounds today.

"This is an independent investigation of the cause," said McCabe.

Approximately $100,000 will be paid to dependents of the dead and injured through Workmen's Compensation Insurance, the State Industrial Accident Board was informed by Thomas C. Calhoun, local manager of the Royal Indemnity Company.

This amount is the largest ever to be paid out in Massachusetts in insurance as the result of one accident, according to the Stock board.

A relief fund was started by the Everett Trust Co. President R. E. Kahle of the Beacon Oil Co. said the workmen had group life insurance and the families of those killed will receive checks from this source within a day or two.

Mayor Roche Sees No "Neglect" as Blast Cause

Mayor James A. Roche of Everett, himself an employe of the Beacon Oil Company, today declared that, in his opinion, company officials had taken every precaution to guard against such a horror as occurred yesterday, and that there was no evidence of neglect being responsible for the explosion.

At the same time, he said, heads of the Everett police and fire departments are conducting separate investigations, and if blame is established the guilty will be punished.

U. S. TO NEGOTIATE MORE ARBITRATION TREATIES

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP).—Germany will be invited by the United States to enter into an arbitration treaty similar to that recently signed with France. The arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States and that with Japan will also be taken up.

Mr. Kellogg explained that the treaty with France does not provide for the outlawry of war. "It is purely an arbitration treaty for judicial questions," said Mr. Kellogg.

Money Talks as Men Are Dying in Oil Blast

Telephone calls, as incongruous in their nature as a ghastly joke, flooded into the stricken plant of the Beacon Oil Company today:

"My beds were knocked down. What are you going to do about it?"

"Say, that explosion of yours broke a lot of my dishes. When will you replace them?"

And four times, even while firemen sought to recover still another body visible in the ruins, one man called to ask:

"My windows—when'll you fix my windows that you broke?"

MOVE TO CLOSE BEACON PLANT

A request that he enjoin the Beacon Oil Company from doing any further business in the plant at Everett was today received by State Fire Marshal George C. Neal and will be taken up at the time of the inquest into the fatal explosion.

The petitioners, the marshal said, are the same as those who filed a similar request five years ago.

The marshal indicated nothing could be done to bring about the removal of the plant or in prosecuting it. So far as he has been able to learn, he said, the explosion was not due to criminal negligence on the part of the company.

He told of having warned the company to exercise more care in the matter of safety on several occasions in recent years and of assurances given by the company.

BEACON OIL CO. BEGINS ITS OWN BLAST PROBE

An investigation by the Beacon Oil Co. to ascertain the cause of the fatal explosion in Everett today under the supervision of company officials and two leading experts—Dr. R. T. Haslam of New York, formerly of M. I. T., and F. L. Newcomb of the same city.

An official of the concern stated that the company desired to hide nothing and had offered the district attorney fullest co-operation.

Dr. Haslam is manager of the development department of the Standard Oil Development Corp. of New York. The other expert is chief of the pressure still division of that corporation. Prof. Ward, who is investigating for the district attorney, recently succeeded Dr. Haslam at Technology.

The inquiry began with questioning of employes.

"The stills were freshly cleaned and inspected," a company official said. "They were reported absolutely O. K. on January 18. They had been 'taken down' and gotten ready for a new 'trick' or shift of workmen and had been in operation several hours when the explosion occurred."

PHONE GIRL IS EXPLOSION HEROINE

Partially stunned by the explosion, and finding her switchboard temporarily out of commission, Miss Mary E. English, lunchless sports-car at the Jamaica Plain, retained enough presence of mind to run to a pay station and summon fire apparatus, ambulances and physicians.

Miss English, whose home is at 7 Dane ave., Jamaica Plain, was at her post in the administrative building when the blast occurred. Realizing at once the scope of the disaster, and finding her own board damaged by the explosion, she dashed through the clouds of black smoke to another phone, reached the emergency operator and sounded the alarm.

Then she returned to the switchboard, which was immediately repaired, and with May Irwin, Agnes Barry and Emma Hoseason, handled, during the hours of confusion following, hundreds of emergency calls.

VICTORY PLANT DROPS 28 OIL TANKS PLEA

The Quincy licensing commission gave the Victory Terminal Corporation "leave to withdraw" its application for a permit to allow the erection of 28 oil storage tanks at the old Squantum Victory plant. City Councillor Welcome G. Young asked for a postponement of the hearing of the application. Chairman Emery Crane of the commission ruled that a postponement would not be legal, but that leave to withdraw would allow the corporation later to bring a similar application before the body.

FOX CAUGHT ON FRANKLIN ST.

and McNeill of division 2 transported him.

Whether or not the fox rode into town on a poultry truck, or ambled in from the north to look over a big city, the fact remains he was first seen on Franklin st., near Washington, where a group of girl stenographers were on their way to work.

The girls screamed as what they took at first to be a dog dashed into the group, shot through one woman's legs, almost upsetting her, and then with tail in air, bounded down the street.

The hunt was on. A number of men gave chase and Patrolmen Lake and McNeill joined in. The fox raced down the street, dashing into doorways in a vain attempt to "go to earth," but managing to elude his pursuers when they thought they had him surrounded.

At the corner of Broad street, where new building construction is going on, the animal burrowed under a pile of lumber and the hunt was over. While workmen surrounded the pile the two policemen crawled underneath and drew forth the frightened animal, which submitted peacefully to capture. At the zoo it was stated the fox did not escape from there, and its appearance in the city will probably remain a mystery.

SANDINO FLEES NICARAGUA

Sandino intends to reach northern coast of Honduras. He was reported to be at La Furia in the mountains northeast of Jalapa on Feb. 4. There is ample evidence that all the rifles that Sandino has were procured in Nicaragua from men who failed to turn them in. Sandino's ammunition is practically gone."

On the basis of this message, Chairman Borah of the committee declared that "if this is correct the outlook is very good."

All the data relating to American intervention in Nicaragua was placed before the committee by Secretary Wilbur and a staff of naval and marine officers at the committee hearing.

It showed that 12 Americans and 156 Nicaraguans have been killed since marines went to that country.

the cause at all costs, President Kahle announced. The extent of the property damage is problematical.

Funeral arrangements for the dead were begun today, as soon as positive identifications were made by Medical Examiner Durrell.

Nine bodies were taken from the ruins and these were identified by various means at J. E. Henderson Undertaking Parlors, 517 Broadway, Everett. Three other men died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Two men reported missing, Francis Murphy of 31 Franklin st., Everett, and James Doane of 1 Vine st., Everett, were found at home. They had been working until midnight and thus were missed in last night's checking, which was made at the homes of the workmen.

Mrs. Margaret McIntosh of 14 South Ferry st., Everett, went to Henderson's rooms and insisted on seeing the body which was identified by fellow workmen as that of her husband, Donald. She was finally permitted to view the charred remains, but could not identify the body in this way. She accepted the official identification and arranged for burial from the undertaking rooms Monday afternoon.

FUNERALS MONDAY

The funerals of several others will take place in Everett, Malden, Cambridge and Boston on Monday.

More than 100 courageous applicants for work at the refinery lined up before the employment office on Bowdoin st., Everett, while the families of the dead and injured figures on hard times ahead because of the cessation of income.

Many of these unemployed were on hand before daybreak. All were turned away. There was some work going on at the plant, tank wagons carrying oil and gasoline away from the storage tanks as usual.

The last three dead to be identified were Joseph Partridge of Franklin st., Everett; Coleman Flaherty of Winchester, and Harry Hooper of 31 Argyle st., Everett. Hooper was identified by his dentist, who had a chart of his teeth.

So engrossed and without warning came the blast that rocked Everett, shook houses in the suburbs of Charlestown and Chelsea, and broke windows for miles around, that investigators found it hard to determine without further search just how the explosion occurred.

PICTURE OF RUINS

Practically all that is known is that one of the low-pressure vaporizers in one of the distilling buildings blew up, being followed by several smaller explosions as surging flame reached other buildings.

The history of the 24 hours only is a picture of utter ruin and destruction that brought near ruin, for in every corner police, firemen and volunteer workers knew to extricate whatever bodies may be found.

Huge lights sent down a fitful glare on the gnome-like workers through the early morning hours, while here and there a frantic woman could be seen frantically seeking news of "Pete."

But one official statement from the company has been issuing on the tragedy, that from President B. Kahle of the company. He said: "The alarm was sounded when a failure of the low pressure vaporizer which is behind some of the high pressure equipment. No high pressure vaporizer let go."

Acting Governor Allen Offers Everett State Aid

Acting Governor Frank G. Allen today sent the following telegram of condolence to Mayor James A. Roche of Everett: "The calamity of yesterday has deeply shocked the whole state. GIRL AT HOSPITAL

The authorities are anxious to learn whether the shooting of Tucker was an outcome of this row.

Four youths took Tucker to the hospital, where doctors found he was mortally wounded with a bullet below the heart.

one in the abdomen and two in the legs. His condition was too serious for an operation to be undertaken.

Louis Tucker's cot at the hospital sat May Gordon of Columbia rd., Dorchester, who said she was Louis' sweetheart. He steadfastly refused pleaded that she be allowed to see her blood.

Police, in squads, scattered through the city in a search for Charles Sherman, alias "the chink," of Detroit who was named by the victim and his brother as the mysterious slayer. They stated that he had killed Joseph Tucker another brother six years ago but escaped conviction after being arrested for the crime.

Later Inspector James R. Claflin took Tucker's finger prints and identified him from the rogues gallery as Max Schwartz, alias Louis Tucker, alias Charles Lewis, alias "The Hook," alias Max Fine, alias Levenson, alias Gordon, a Russian by birth, who has served sentences in segregating Kenyz, chiefly on convictions of picking pockets.

The records showed that Tucker Reformatory, Auburn, New York Workhouse, New York City Reformatory, Elmira Prison, N. Y. He was convicted, among other things of larceny from the person, attempt to break and enter, burglary, attempted grand larceny, vagrancy and disorderly conduct. He was picked up three times on suspicion by Boston inspectors and his photo and prints are in the local gallery.

JOHN D. JR. ENDS OLD DISPUTE

Tarrytown, N. Y., Feb. 10 (AP)—The purchase by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of a plot of one and three quarters acres in Pocantico Hills has ended a former dispute between the Rockefellers and the Foleys, village dairymen.

The transaction, which was disclosed today, was said to have involved $40,000.

John J. Foley said that he met Mr. Rockefeller while driving through the estate. The owner shook hands, he said, and agreed that the dispute was foolish and negotiations leading to the sale were begun.

CRUSHED TO DEATH UNDER FREIGHT CAR

John E. McNamara, 22, a yard helper for the Boston & Maine railroad at yard 9, Washington st., Somerville, was killed today when he was crushed under the wheels of a freight car. McNamara resides at 88 West Sheldon st., Mattapan.

SIX CHILDREN INJURED IN COASTING ACCIDENTS

Worcester, Feb. 11 (AP)—Six coasting accidents, three of which it is believed will prove fatal, have occurred within 24 hours as a result of children sliding on forbidden streets.

FAMILIES OF VICTIMS GET $6000 EACH

Richard B. Kahle, president of the Beacon Oil Company, today gave assurance that the families of employes killed and injured by the explosion would be adequately cared for.

He said that each family of an employe killed will receive $5000 under the workmen's compensation act and checks for $1,000 each were being sent out today from the group life insurance bureau of the company.

This statement was supplemented by an announcement by Thomas H. Calhoun, local manager of the Royal Indemnity Company, carrier of the Workmen's Compensation at the plant, who said that approximately $100,000 will be paid to the dependents of the dead and injured by his concern.

He said that under the provisions of the Act, widows with children are entitled to $6,400 and those without children, $4000, as contrasted to the straight $5000 named by President Kahle. Employes totally incapacitated are eligible for amounts as high as $7500, depending on the nature of the disability, he added.

The estimated amount of $100,000, the industrial accident board officials declared, is the largest amount ever paid out in Massachusetts in insurance as the result of one accident.

In cases such as the Gilligan family, where there are a mother and six children, one of them newborn, with only $2 in the house, the company will be guided by circumstances, President Kahle said.

PROVIDE FOR FAMILIES.

Following a personal inspection of the ruins, made with Superintendent Henry H. Hewison, President Kahle responded as follows to questions submitted by newspapermen:

"All of the employes of the Beacon Oil Co. killed or injured are covered for the Workmen's Compensation act, under the terms of which families of men killed will receive a total of $5000 each over the usual period of payment. In addition, all of the families of the men killed will receive checks for $1000 each today, as the employes being under group life insurance. We are arranging those payments today."

Referring to the Gilligan case, to which his attention was called, President Kahle said:

"In the case of the Gilligan case, in addition to the Workmen's Compensation payment and the group life insurance payment, he will be governed by circumstances in each case as to what will be done."

"It may be that later in the day we may be able to tell exactly what the cause was. All we can know is that a low pressure vaporizer of some know there was an explosion. Whether it was secondary or primary event we don't know. We think the vaporizer let go first but we don't know. We are examining the construction of equipment and men will enable us to reach a definite conclusion. We are making every investigation to the end, wherever it leads."

EQUIPMENT MODERN.

Asked about the danger of recurrence, he said:

"We can't answer that until we know the cause. We are doing all we can to prevent accidents. We are using the most approved and modern methods of operation and inspection. As far as fire prevention and fire fighting equipment is concerned, the facilities of the plant are in excess of the requirements of municipal and state authorities.

"Every bit of the plant destroyed was new since 1923. As regards the future, it is hard to guess until we have time to make a thorough check of equipment."

Blast Relief Fund

A few minutes after it was opened, a relief fund started today by the Everett Trust Company in Everett for the families of the dead in the Beacon Oil Company explosion contained a total of $1122. The contributors were:

Everett Trust Company $500
Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Holmes..... 100
Mayor James A. Roche..... 25

BOY GIVES MITE FOR BEREFT 6

Twenty-five cents profit means a day of fame and hard work for a newsboy.

So when Sidney Szathmary, 14, walked into the Boston Evening American office and sold fifty-two bits for the Gilligan family it meant rather more, comparatively, than the gift of Mr. Rockefeller's million dollar gifts.

Sidney lives at No. 362 Walnut ave., Roxbury, where he not only sells but reads the newspapers. When he read that the wife and six children of Joseph Gilligan, one of Malden were left virtually penniless and without means of support by the killing of Gilligan in the Everett oil blast, he figured that somebody else might be alive who would prefer to better advantage than himself.

"I don't want it for the general fund," he said in a note he left with his pennies. "Go to the Gilligans it was."

Light Rates Cut Denied

The State Public Utilities Commission today dismissed the petition of power cost users of the Haverhill Electric company, located in Newburyport, for a reduction in its power rates. The commission held that the small householders and the majority of the power users are benefiting under the existing schedule.

BABY WAITS IN VAIN FOR DAD

Ever since Katherine was big enough to walk alone she has waited at the top of the stairs to kiss her daddy when he came home from the Beacon Oil plant evenings and ride triumphantly into the kitchen on his shoulder. She knew something was wrong yesterday when her mother acted so funny running to the plant when she heard the terrible explosion that rocked the house and a long while afterward coming home and praying even while she stuffed the haddock that her daddy requested for supper.

IT'S ALL SO STRANGE

It was all incomprehensible to Katherine—this world of wait and ask; daddy why mother acted so queer. Her three sisters and five brothers were strangely silent when she helped herself to their toys and things.

But daddy did not come home for supper last night. The child waited and waited until she turned in, made her own bed and went to sleep.

Mother thought that she was helping to bring out the injured like he did in the explosion in September, 1924. They wouldn't let her in, Joseph interrupted. "Mother wanted to move away after that other explosion, but dad said it was no use to run from death."

Mary and George, 15, work at the Warren Box factory, and Joseph, 17, is out of employment at present. The others, Bert, 14; John, 11; Lorna, 13; Cecelia, 9; Rose, 6, all go to school.

But Katherine, the baby, stays at home to wait all day for the home coming kiss at the top of the stairs.

Russia in League Session

Geneva, Feb. 11 (AP)—The Soviet government has informed the Secretary-General of the League of Nations that Russia will be represented by an observer at the meeting of the League Committee on Security and Arbitration here February 20, it was given.

CALL HAYS; OIL BONDS TRACED TO G. O. P.

Dominion Bank of Canada, testified as to Liberty bond transactions with the Continental, but failed to disclose the ultimate disposition of the securities.

The surroundings of the Teapot Dome committee have for weeks been filled with rumors of political use of the Continental bonds, and during the testimony of Robert W. Stewart, he ..unctered that he had given none of the continental profits to no party or official.

In 1924, Hays testified before the oil committee that Sinclair made a contribution of $75,000 to the committee in 1923 and that he believed this sum was used to pay off a debt of the national committee at the Empire Trust Company.

An official of the Empire Trust Company named Baldwin testified Holmes du Pont, of Delaware, paid off two notes at the Empire Trust with Liberty bonds which he believed du Pont received from Hays.

ROCKEFELLER TO HELP.

The numbers of $25,000 worth of these bonds, it was stated today, check with the numbers of those which the Continental Trading Company once had.

Near the close of the testimony Mr. Rockefeller agreed to inaugurate among all the companies in which he owns interest a search for the missing Liberty bonds in the oil expose scandal.

Mr. Rockefeller declared himself to be "bitterly disappointed" that Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana had risked a jail sentence to withhold testimony before the committee, but at the same time he expressed the utmost confidence in Stewart's integrity.

"I totally disagree with the position he has taken," Mr. Rockefeller said of Stewart, but he informed the committee that in conference with the chairman of the Indiana board he had not discussed the matter, except to receive Stewart's assurance that neither himself nor his company had profited from the Continental deal.

Rockefeller was sworn by Chairman Nye.

"Do you or any of the associations with which you are connected own any stock in the Standard Oil of Indiana," Senator Walsh of Montana, the committee prosecutor asked.

"I own 402,280 shares," was the reply. "The Rockefeller Foundation has 460,760 shares and the University of Chicago, 50,000 while 500,000 shares are held in trust for my two sisters."

WHERE DOHENY SAT.

Rockefeller said he personally owned 4½ per cent of the Standard Oil of Indiana; the Foundation, 8 per cent and the University of Chicago, one-third of one per cent. The total holdings were given as just short of 15 per cent.

Walsh piled his questions in the hands on from which the Teapot Dome inquiry began four years ago and where Edward L. Doheny volunteered the long-disputed fact he loaned Albert B. Fall $100,000 in cash during the negotiations for the lease of the Elk Hills, Cal., naval reserve.

"My sense of obligation to do everything in my power for the uncovering of this national scandal is not a matter of my stockholders," he said. "I thank you, gentlemen, for the opportunity to come here and aid you.

"This situation is far-reaching. It affects certain individual. But beyond that it affects the whole industry, which is under suspicion. It affects the whole business structure."

Only by bringing all the facts to light "can the cloud over the oil industry be dispelled," Rockefeller testified. He added:

"The salient facts seem to me to be as follows:

"Three of those related to this national scandal it has been impossible to get. Two more are before the committee. Then there is Col. Stewart. I have every confidence in Col. Stewart."

Stewart Resented Rockefeller Interest in Oil Inquiry

The witness then read the statement he issued at the time, stating his desire that all the facts in the oil scandal should be given. Continuing, Mr. Rockefeller said he first discussed the situation with Stewart in 1925.

"He showed considerable resentment," Rockefeller said, adding that this resentment related to the implication that he was out of the deal by design.

He talked with Stewart again last Monday, Rockefeller said.

"I believed then, and I believe now that Colonel Stewart has told the truth," he added. "I disagree with the position he took here, but it was impossible to discuss the subject with Colonel Stewart, as you gentlemen perhaps can understand.

Walsh then recited the details, telling of the efforts Stewart made to get the oil which the Continental afterwards obtained at $1.20 a barrel and resold at $1.75 a barrel to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company and the Prairie Oil & Gas. The crude company is partly owned by the Standard of Indiana.

The witness said that so long as he had confidence in the integrity of the management of a company in which he had stock he should support the management.

"The moment I feel that evidence is such that I cannot believe in their integrity I am prepared to withdraw my support," he added.

"As a stockholder I want no profits that are derived by a compromise with right."

Replying to questions by Senator Walsh, Rockefeller said he never knew or heard anything about the Continental Trading Company and that he read about it in the newspapers.

STEWART OBDURATE.

"Three witnesses who were at the conference said the price of $1.75 was never mentioned," Walsh said with emphasis.

This was a conference of oil men in New York when the Continental deal was put through and where Stewart testified a resale price of $1.75 a barrel was asked for the oil.

"Were you aware of the substance of these facts when you talked to Colonel Stewart last Monday?" the senator continued.

"Not in detail," was the reply.

"You didn't question Col. Stewart about them?"

"In neither interview was Col. Stewart willing to discuss the matter, other than to say that neither he nor his company had done anything improper. Even if I had had the facts I think it would have been quite impossible to have got Col. Stewart to discuss the details in either interview."

Mr. Rockefeller then repeated that he had every confidence in Stewart and regarded him as a very competent, capable business man.

"Can you then make any surmise as to how Col. Stewart could have been so far out-traded for the Humphreys oil?"

"I haven't undertaken to," Mr. Rockefeller replied. "It certainly isn't characteristic of the colonel to pay more than he has to in any deal."

"Mr. Rockefeller, do you know anything about the disposition of these bonds?"

"Nothing whatever."

WILL HUNT BONDS.

"Have you made any effort to find out whether by chance some of these bonds got into the possession of any of the companies you are interested in?" Rockefeller was asked.

"That had not occurred to me."

"Could you have the management of the companies make an inquiry?"

"I certainly could; that is, I can set on foot an inquiry. You mean the Foundation?"

"Yes, and all the companies with which you are associated."

"I would be very happy to do so."

WHAT JOHN D., SR., OWNS.

Replying to Chairman Nye, Rockefeller said the most interest his father ever had in the old Standard Oil, even before the dissolution was 23 per cent. He added that his father now owns no stock in the Standard Oil of Indiana.

The witness agreed with Nye that it was "passing strange" that Stewart permitted Blackmer to remain as chairman of the board of the Midwest even after he felt that Blackmer was "playing the game" for Humphreys in the oil deal rather than that of the Standard Oil of Indiana, which owns the Midwest. A. E. Humphreys of Dever sold to the Continental the oil which was sold back to the American companies.

C. S. Howard of Toronto, Canada, inspector of the Dominion Bank of Canada, then was called. He was manager of the New York branch of the Dominion Bank during the Continental transactions.

He said he purchased Liberty bonds at the instruction of H. S. Osler, president of the Continental Trading Company. He added that Osler had no connection with the bank except that occasionally the institution availed itself of his legal advice.

During a painstaking examination of the records of the bank Walsh developed that the Dominion Bank had lent the Continental Trading Company $300,000 without any security and at a time when the company's balance was $51,000.

...IUT DOES IT MEAN?

Until today's inspection of the files, the witness found that the bank held a note for $500,000 from the Humphreys Mexia Company to the Continental Company at the time the loan was made.

After the purchase of $3,080,000 of Liberty bonds by the Continental Trading Company had been shown, Walsh asked Howard if he knew what the transactions meant.

"I couldn't tell," the witness replied. "I would have considered it an impertinence to have asked him. Mr. Osler is a client of the Dominion Bank of the highest standing."

Howard had no knowledge of the disposition of the bonds after they reached Osler.

It was developed Osler had a "special account," into this special went $ per cent of the transactions of the Continental Co.

The witness said that under Osler's instructions the Liberty bonds purchased with the Continental profits were divided by the bank into four separate packages of equal amounts. Osler took them away under his arm.

ON SECOND HONEYMOON

AFTER "$100,000 JOKE" DIVORCE

Mrs. Louis Berger of Brookline is on a second honeymoon at Palm Beach after both she and her husband petitioned the court for a dismissal of the divorce granted her last October. The divorce, which was not due to become absolute until May 1, was said to be the outgrowth of a "$100,000 joke."

CLOUDY TODAY AND TOMORROW

The persistant storm area hovering over New England which caused recent sporadic snowfalls, was centered today off the Canadian provinces and is officially predicted to disintegrate before nightfall.

Its feathery tail, however, still trails the sections east of the Ohio valley and is expected to cloud Greater Boston skies tomorrow.

Temperatures throughout the country, with the exception of New England, have risen generally, but no elevation in the mercury is predicted hereabouts until Sunday night, at the earliest.

Greenville, Me., with a temperature of 6 below this morning was the coldest spot today in the United States.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Sunday; not much change in temperature; fresh north to west winds.

WHEELER RAPS COOLIDGE 'WAR' IN NICARAGUA

Nicaragua, he asserted, has been reduced from "a sovereign state" to "a Wall Street protectorate."

Moreover, the Montanan charged, the Coolidge administration has "sacrificed at least 700 lives" in Nicaragua, "deviated from the policy of economy, squandered countless thousands of our public treasury, cost our country the good will of all South and Central America and permitted certain Wall Street bankers to finally fastern their financial tentacles upon the unfortunate Nicaraguan nation and suck it dry."

"DOLLAR DIPLOMACY."

"We have dealt harshly enough with Haiti, San Domingo and other Caribbean Republics," he continued, "but our treatment of Nicaragua is the most disgraceful chapter of our whole course of 'dollar diplomacy.'"

As another point Wheeler declared that "if the American people, hopeless, pathetic, duped by the systematic propaganda of the State Department, had not lost every memory of true American tradition, they would protest so loudly that this administration would stop this unjustifiable war and the killing of innocent men, women and children.

"When the history of our times is written truthfully, this administration will be called to account for its unwarranted conduct, which has been actuated solely for the benefit of a very few Wall Street bankers, no matter how much they may seek to hide behind a paper mail."

Using such terms as "sophomoric utterances" and "pious platitudes," Wheeler at the outset launched upon a criticism of President Coolidge's recent speech before the Pan-American conference at Havana.

Mr. Coolidge's reference to the Golden Rule, in particular aroused the Montanan's displeasure. He declared it "the golden rule of Wall Street bankers."

And even as Mr. Coolidge was delivering his address, the Senator said, the Havana conference were "selling extra tailing about American bombing planes scattering death and horror over defenseless Nicaraguan villages."

Wheeler charged that United States consuls have encouraged and aided revolutions "to further the financial interests of certain Wall Street banks," that the government itself had acted as a "debt collector" and "bond salesman."

He said, too that "influential officials in the State Department" after assisting in certain "coups" had on "at least two occasions" resigned and found employment "with the bankers they had befriended" in connection he mentioned Lawrence Dennis, former charge d'affaires in Nicaragua.

NAMES U. S. BANKERS.

American banking firms, he said, had "looted Nicaragua" of public funds, "instigated revolution after revolution" and "reaped a harvest." His happy Nicaraguans in much the same manner that Imperial Rome robbed its conquered provinces. He named these firms as J. & W. Seligman & Co. and Brown Brothers.

Since 1909, when American forces were first landed in Nicaragua, Mr. Wheeler said, the Marines have been used for the advantage of American financial houses.

He charged they had been employed to keep in office those Nicaraguan officials who favored the American interests, and that on one occasion when a President inimical to the American interests had been put in office, the Marines were withdrawn, inviting a revolution, which quickly followed.

The Montana Senator brought his address to a conclusion with a plea that America should not "substitute for 'righteousness exalteth a nation' any maxim that somehow we are remotely like 'the world be damned.'"

THEOLOGICAL CLASS ON BOSTON AMERICAN VISIT

The entire plant of the Boston Evening American was inspected today by a class of young men and young women from the Gordon Theological School, Evanswav, Boston. This is a class in Christian Ethics conducted by the Rev. Robert Watson, of the First Presbyterian Church, and president of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches. Mrs. E. A. MacGregor superintended the visit.

Their trip of newspaper exploration was made more interesting because they followed from department to department this piece of news about Admiral Byrd, as it came from the reporter's hand to the presses, and as it came from the collers.

FULLER PRAISED BY CAMBRIDGE COUNCIL

A resolution of the Cambridge City Council, commending Governor Fuller's credit for the recent reduction ordered by the Public Service Commission in the rates of the Cambridge Electric Light Company, was made public at the State House today.

The Governor's "courageous stand for lower rates was praised and he was termed "one of the Commonwealth's most progressive and courageous Governors."

SCHOOL BOX ALARM FOR BRIGHTON CELLAR FIRE

Firemen were given a scare today when an alarm was sent in from a box at the Harvard school, North Harvard st., Brighton, for a fire in a nearby dwelling.

The fire proved to be in the basement of the 2½-story dwelling of Cornelius Barrett 200 North Harvard st. The family fled, but Barrett helped fight the flames. Smarts from the furnace are believed to have been the cause. Damage was estimated at $200.

300 SOLDIERS ROUTED AS FLAMES SWEEP FORT

New York, Feb. 11 (ENS)—Three hundred soldiers were routed from their slumbers early today when fire swept through Ft. Tompkins, Staten Island, an ancient stone fortification, in which four companies, comprising the Third Battalion, 16th Infantry, have been quartered. The fire started in the supply room and quickly spread to the soldiers' sleeping quarters.

PAY FINAL TRIBUTES TO REP. SULLIVAN

Hundreds of political friends and labor leaders paid tribute today at the funeral services for Rep. Lewis H. Sullivan at St. Peter's Church, Dorchester. Interment took place at Old Calvary Cemetery, West Roxbury.

JUNIOR SUPPER DANCE WISELY DELAYED, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Youthful Matrons in Receiving Line Are Arrayed in Most Formal Attire

MATRONS WHO DIRECT JUNIOR SUPPER DANCE DESTINIES have done very wisely this winter to postpone well into the late season this ultra smart series of Younger Set affairs. By now the debutante calendar is polished off the slate; "midyears" have been successfully (we hope) weathered; and so the set that has flourished more than one season in society comes blithely into its own, with anticipations whetted by the delay. It is to the more-than-a-year-out coterie that the supper dances are entirely devoted SHOULDER-LENGTH WHITE GLOVES CAME OUT OF scented wrappings to give an "Assembly-like" touch to the receiving line at the supper dance Mrs James Lawrence in white and silver, Mrs. Frederick Stronz Moseley in black lace and diamonds and Mrs. Henry Bohlen in supple velvet of chartreuse green dutifully strapped into the long gloves, that the receiving line might not lack strict formality. The youthful Mrs Bohlen, out a short two years ago Miss Margaret Curtis pretty as a picture in her rippling draperies, was a charmingly girlish adornment to the line.

CERTAIN MANIFESTATIONS OF THE MODE WERE cleverly emphasized. One in particular, the jacket as an adjunct to the evening gown. Miss Mary Louise Almy added to her black net frock a jacket all scintillation and glitter. Silver-heeled, black slippers were in touch. Miss Betty Soule's green moire had a tulle hem that dipped to the heels of her green slippers—in the "down-in-the-back" line. Indeed, scarcely a single hem rippled an even way all about, and scarcely a bodice was without its "uneven line. Fashion says both are "good" this winter.

MISS ELEANOR GIBSON'S ROSE FROCK HAD A SHOULDER drapery; Miss Betty Moulton's bright satin was the long-waisted affair draped into a "bustle." Miss Virginia Parker's nattier blue frock had brilliants at the V points of its decolletage, and a down on one side drapery. Miss Emelie Winslow's Burne-Jones head rose from a small black and white frock. Miss Delza Gray in black and Miss Juliet Greene in black were charming examples of young girl good looks set off by that sombre, though effective, color. Mrs. George Pierce Baker, Jr., wore black, but added a dash of glitter, in diamante bands.

MISS GABRIELLA LADD'S PETUNIA PINK SLIPPERS AND the posy on her shoulder exactly matched, and her gown was black velvet. Miss Barbara Little's figured black velvet was an effective creation. Mrs. Andrew N. Winslow, Jr., was in green moire, swooping down on one side. Miss Helen Moseley was in black taffeta; Miss Virginia Curtin's costume jewels were elaborate earrings and necklace of matrix, to match the sash of her taffeta frock. Miss Virginia Lees wore a French frock of beads and sequins on pink crepe; Mrs. Daniel Comstock was in peachblow crepe; Miss Nancy Wentworth wore peche chiffon.

A PRETTY YOUNG MATRON CAME OVER FROM NEW YORK for the supper dance. Her smart young coterie here in town knew and loved her as Miss Polly Webster. Now she's an important Gothamite, wedded to Henry P. D. Harris. Her frock last evening was golden yellow. Miss Elizabeth Lyman, a supper hostess at the dance and a dinner hostess beforehand, wore black net in the sophisticated mode, with silver and black lace and stunning costume jewelry. Miss Miriam Winslow's frock was beaded and sequined in geometric design. Miss Olga Frothingham wore pink taffeta with set.

SCENICALLY, THE OPERA PICTURE CONTINUES TO delight, even as the season swings on to its close. "Traviata" filled once again, from its orchestra pit t its gilded dome. Boston's only home of Grand Opera. And as usual, the upper balconyites swarmed down to rub elbows with the haute monde during "the" intermission. And the haute monde was none the worse for the mingling, so it seemed. I glimpsed during the promenade the very stunning spouse of Alexander Henry Higginson. Her opera costume was in the gleaming, glittering mode, with elaborate slippers in keeping.

MRS. WILLIAM GORDON MEANS, ENTERTAINING IN HER box, was effective, as she always is Her gown was black and white. Mr and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft had an opera group. Miss Betty Soule, Miss Eleanor Gibson and Mrs. George Burgess were in the Weld box before continuing festivities at the supper dance. Miss Gibson, by the way, is doing the grand tour this spring, Egypt and the Mediterranean, the Continent and the British Isles. No more stunning member of the younger set than Miss Mabel Thayer has appeared at opera. She wore a white crepe frock, without a single fleck of color. A superbly attractive girl is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Bayard Thayer, of Boston and Lancaster.

NO ONE OF MISS JESSIE BANCROFT'S SMART SET CIRCLE IS in the least bit surprised at today's announcement of her engagement. For in these many days an enormous solitaire on the significant finger has told its blissful story. The young man in question is William C. Cox, son of Mrs. Thomas G. Cox of Readville. His Harvard class is 1928 and his club affiliations are the Hasty Pudding Club, the Owl, and the Institute of 1770, important as societies go. Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft of Cohasset and Beacon street are the fiance's parents.

HAVING IMPORTANTLY-PLACED WASHINGTON FRIENDS almost beyond the counting, Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons is having the gayest of visits in the Federal City. So brisk is her schedule she scarcely can keep pace with it. Mrs. Frederick Gillett's tea preceded a dinner and theatre party. Mrs. Alvin V. Hart gave a luncheon, and teas, luncheons, theatre parties and supper dances follow one another with rapidity quite bewildering.

THE SWIRL OF OFFICIAL LIFE AS DONE IN THE CAPITAL has caught Mrs. Emmons in its brilliant vortex. Tea at the British Embassy, tea at the White House, a box party for "Diplomacy" (all the rage in Washington), dinners with the Nicholas Longworths, the Trubee Davisons and the Robert Bacons also figure in Mrs. Emmons' program. With a wonderful wardrobe of dancing frocks, her Washington progress is meteoric. She will not be back in town until the Washington program flags and she has moved through a similar social maze in Gotham.

ST. PAUL SCHOOL BOYS, UP AT CONCORD, ARE ENTERtaining over this weekend for their annual dance, their play and the winter sports. Girls of the sub-debutante persuasion are being taken to Concord, duly chaperoned, for the festivities. Mrs. Horace Morison is one Boston mater shepherding a group of the not-yet-outs. The New Hampshire town will be en fete for the schoolboys and their celebrations.

COLLAPSES ON HEARING GIRL FACES DEATH

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 11 (I.N.S.).—A foster mother collapsed here today when she learned that her adopted daughter had been sentenced to death in Quebec on a murder charge.

Dr. Frances Palmer, the mother, a practising physician in electro-therapy here, had not heard from her daughter, Doris Palmer, for some time and had believed she was in New York.

Doris Palmer McDonald, the daughter, with her second husband, are under sentence to die in Montreal for murder.

DEMANDS NEW HICKMAN TRIAL

Courtroom, Los Angeles, Feb. 11 —Contending that William Edward Hickman has been deprived of the right of a trial by jury on the charge of kidnaping and murdering 12-year-old Marion Parker, counsel for William Edward Hickman today asked that "The Fox" be granted a new trial.

Sentence, which was to have been pronounced by Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco, was continued until Tuesday morning.

Walsh contended Hickman had been deprived of the right of a trial by jury, due to the proceedings under the new California law governing the defense of insanity in criminal cases, and that the proceedings were in contravention of both the federal and state constitution.

LEVINE ON LONG FLIGHT, GOES ONLY 200 FEET

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Feb. 11 (A.P.).—A minor accident to the monoplane Columbia as it was taking off today with Wilmer Stultz as pilot and Charles A. Levine as passenger caused a one-day postponement of the latest attempt to bring the endurance flight record back to America.

After saying their farewells to relatives and friends, Levine and Stultz started the "Columbia" down the runway. Two hundred feet from the starting point, however, Stultz swerved the plane suddenly to avoid striking an automobile which stood in the path of the plane and the rudder post broke.

LAST EFFORTS ARE MADE TO SAVE 40 MINERS

Timmins, Ont., Feb. 11 (INS)—With at least six persons known dead, this little place waited anxiously today for the arrival of the rescue train that is rushing with special smoke-fighting equipment in a last desperate effort to save the lives of 40 other men who are still trapped in the fire-swept Mollinger mine.

The dense smoke and fumes from refuse and old powder boxes has penetrated into the lowest levels of the mine and the chance of bringing the trapped men out alive is slight.

U. S. SCORES ON INTERVENTION QUESTION

Havana, Feb. 11 (INS)—Complete agreement on the bitterly disputed controversy as to what the sixth Pan-American conference will say on the subject of intervention was expected to be reached at today's session of the special subcommittee working on the problem.

The subcommittee, headed by Charles E. Hughes, meets behind closed doors and that the session will result in agreement was the opinion of most of its members. It was authoritatively forecast that the agreement will not embarrass the United States.

The subcommittee will base its recommendations on the report submitted to the international law commission by Dr. Victor Maurtua of Peru. It was understood the subcommittee had already reached practical agreement on five of the six sections of the Maurtua report. Changes were made in the original draft so as to meet the wishes of the delegates. But the substance was preserved.

The solution expected today, it was said, will in all probability agree with the recommendations already declared satisfactory by Charles E. Hughes.

New Instructions Sent to Argentine Minister

Buenos Aires, Feb. 11 (AP)—It was understood here today that Argentina will not insist on the inclusion of economic factors in the projected Pan-American Union convention. Such a step, it was felt, would break the deadlock which has developed at the Pan-American conference at Havana because of the insistence of Amb. Honorio Pueyrredon on Argentina in advocating removal of tariff barriers among the American Republics. New instructions have been sent to Dr. Pueyrredon by the foreign office. The sending of these instructions followed a series of conversations between Robert W. Bliss, American ambassador and Foreign Minister Gallardo.

The instructions are also understood to deal with the question of intervention and Nicaragua.

GLORIA SEES HER HUBBY SAIL AWAY TO FRANCE

New York, Feb. 11 (I.N.S.).—Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray, husband of Gloria Swanson, film actress, sailed today for a month's visit in France. Miss Swanson was at the pier to bid him farewell. The marquis, who holds a citizen's passport, returns to France every six months to renew the visa.

COMPANY UNIONS ARE DENOUNCED BY GREEN

Washington, Feb. 11 (A.P.).—Company unions were denounced as "Creatures of the Corporations" today by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, who appeared before the Senate Judiciary sub-committee considering the Shipstead-Ill to restrict the issuance of injunctions by courts in labor disputes.

Bellhop Pastor

DIVINITY STUDENT Albert C. Muller, doorman at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York, is finding it only a stride from doorpull to pulpit. He is a former bellhop and is studying for the ministry. "What you see in this town shows you more preachers are needed," he said.

BOY FIREBUGS FOUND GUILTY

Frank Femiano, 7, of K st., and Patrick McDonough, 14, of D st., both South Boston, who confessed to setting fires in the South Baptist Church and the parochial school of SS. Peter and Paul's Church in South Boston, were found guilty in South Boston Juvenile Court today.

The cases of both were continued to Saturday morning next for disposition, and in the meantime the Femiano boy will be examined by the Judge Baker Foundation.

BOY SCOUTS PERFORM THIN-ICE "RESCUE"

Five Boy Scouts staged a thin-ice rescue today at Prospect bridge, Waltham.

R. Parker Dudley, the "victim," broke through about 40 feet from shore and sent into action Paul Rose, James Thompson, Charles Lazaro, Edwin Parker and Roy Caton of troop 2. Hilliard Holbrook was manager and the work was accomplished without one wasted move. The "props" consisted of a rope and ladder.

Members of 14 troops presented Mayor Beal with similar devices, made by their own hands, to be placed along the banks of the river.

SENORITAS FLY WITH LINDY IN HAVANA

Havana, Feb. 11 (AP)—Although Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has disappointed the Cuban senoritas by his lack of interest in dancing, he showed his gallantry in the air today by taking up several of them on a flight in a large passenger airplane.

The colonel made two flights this morning. On the first one he took as passengers the Cuban secretary of war, the chief of the presidential staff and a party of young Cuban girls. On the second trip he took Mayor Gomez, four civic officials and their wives.

Although the colonel had planned to use a large plane of the Pan-American Airways, at the last minute he shifted to a plane belonging to a representative of the Remington Co.

President Machado plans to go aloft with the colonel at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in a Pan-American Airways ship. The last President that Col. Lindbergh piloted was President Calles of Mexico.

MRS. COOLIDGE IS GREATLY IMPROVED

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—The condition of Mrs. Coolidge, who has been kept to her room in the White House with a cold, was much improved today. The pain in her side, which was believed by White House physicians to have been a local irritation caused by the cold, has disappeared, but she will remain secluded for several days until the effects of her illness are gone.

TWO INJURED WHEN AUTO SKIDS INTO POLE

William R. Furrier of Overlook rd., Arlington, and his sister, Miss Edith Furrier, of the same address, were injured today when their automobile skidded on Mystic ave. at Temple rd., Somerville, and collided with an electric light pole. They were removed to the Somerville Hospital. Miss Furrier sustained injuries to her right hand and leg, while Furrier had injuries to his shoulder.

Lindy 'Godfather' to Bathing Beach in Northern France

Saint-Lo-Dourville, Normandy, France, Feb. 11 (AP)—"Lindbergh Beach" is the new name of the bathing beach at this little west coast resort near Cherbourg.

The town council asked Colonel Lindbergh if he would grant them the honor of using his name. He responded through the American Embassy in Paris that he would be very happy to act as the beach godfather.

A monument to Colonel Lindbergh and in memory of the famous French airmen Nungesser and Coli, will be erected on the beach.

HOLD TEACHER IN BIGAMY CASE

Darien, Ct., Feb. 11 (AP)—Charged with bigamy, James L. Young, Jr., high school teacher here, and formerly of Rumford, Me., was arrested today and admitted to bonds of $1000 to await a hearing.

Young, who married Miss Winifred Benschoten, also a high school teacher here, in November has been sued for divorce by Helena Brazick Young of Rumford, who claims she and Young were married at Portsmouth, N. H., by the city clerk there in 1921, and that she is still legally married to him.

ELSIE MOORE'S DIVORCE FROM COUNT IS HALTED

Bridgeport, Ct., Feb. 11 (INS)—The divorce of Elsie Moore of Greenwich, Ct., from the Duke of Torlonia, Italy, became automatically non-effective today when the law firm of Marsh, Stoddard & Day filed notice of appeal from the decision of Judge John R. Booth of Danbury, who yesterday decided the duchess was entitled to a divorce. The Supreme Court of Errors is now to pass on the case and a hearing is likely during the month of April.

College Girls Assert Petting Necessary

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 11 (INS)—Smoking and drinking are not so bad except when done in an effort to "be smart."

"Petting" is necessary if a girl wishes to date the same fellow again.

The single standard of morals, if it ever materializes, will be far in the future, because men will either have to rise to the standards of women or women sink to the standards of men.

So say co-eds at the University of Iowa.

The occasion for their remarks was an open forum in the double standard of morals sponsored by Sigma Delta Phi, Women's Forensic Society at the Iowa Memorial Union.

Dual responsibility exists for the double standard, the consensus ran. Women are responsible because they look down on the girl who has "fallen," and men are to blame because they won't marry her.

Few men marry the girl who "pets," the co-eds unanimously declared. They like to date her—infact, they don't call again unless she does pet, but the girls they marry are the non-petting variety.

MILLION GO RED AND KILL RICH IN CHINA

Canton, Feb. 11 (AP)—Wholesale murders of propertied classes are taking place in Kwangtung Province.

The Communist activities, which resulted in upheavals in Canton in December, when a thousand persons were slain, are reassuming appreciable proportions.

The coast area, 100 miles north of Hongkong, centering around Hoichaclin and Honghai bays, is the outstanding stronghold of Communism today. There, more than a million farmers, fishermne and sailmakers have "gone Red." They have established a Commune and confiscated property of the wealthy.

The movement is spreading. Wholesale murders of landowners and merchants have occurred.

The Provincial authorities are striving to curb the movement. The Communist activities are developing into an acute situation around Holping, southwest of Canton. There the government took 700 Communist prisoners last December. They were mostly around 20 years old and included many girls.

Many villages have been besieged and razed by the Reds. The village elders were decapitated, their heads were mounted on poles and se t to villages nearby as a warning of the fate to be visited on the inhabitants in case they opposed communism.

The movement has resulted in the evacuation of European Catholic and Protestant missionaries from the aria to Swatow and Hongkong.

TWO KILLED AS GALE SWEEPS OVER ENGLAND

London, Feb. 11 (AP)—At least two fatalities and numerous casualties, some serious, were caused by a gale which swept with hurricane force across England last night.

The gale reached a velocity of 104 miles an hour in Liverpool, tore slates from roofs, uprooted trees and caused damage in many districts.

At Birmingham a roof collapsed into a bedroom where a man and his wife were sleeping. The floor collapsed and the man was killed, the woman being injured. A chimney crashed into a house at Gloucester and the bricks struck a bed where three children were sleeping, killing one.

HIDING MEXICAN BISHOP IS REPORTED ARRESTED

Mexico City, Feb. 11 (AP)—Dispatches from Puebla today said there was reported arrest there of Bishop Miguel de la Mora of San Luis Potosi had been arrested in Puebla City by Mexican City secret service operatives. The bishop, who has been in hiding since most of the prelates were deported last year, was almost captured recently in one of the suburbs of Mexico City

PRIDDY IS TAKEN TO MATTEAWAN HOSPITAL

Riverhead, N. Y., Feb. 11 (INS)—Claude H. Priddy, former Methodist minister, who killed his wife and two sons with an axe after brooding over the biblical warning concerning the "sins of the fathers," was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane at Matteawan today. Priddy does not know that the lunacy commission has declared him insane.

GOODWIN PLANS SAFETY DRIVE

In preparation for a safety campaign to start early in the season and continue into April Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin today suggested it be conducted under auspices of the Massachusetts Safety Council and the Governor's Safety Committee.

In a letter to the chairmen of the two committees, Goodwin advised that they take up with "those in authority at the State House" the question of getting the treasury to contribute some of the funds from automobile fines.

"I have already taken up with Commissioner of Public Works Williams the question of an increased appropriation for the part of the work we hope to do," he said. "Our work will include a state wide campaign to improve equipment of all motor vehicles, including lights and brakes."

4000 CHILDREN FETE EDISON, 81

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb 11 (A.P.)—Thomas A. Edison's 81st birthday arrived today, bringing with it the first public function the inventor has ever attended to honor his anniversary—a testimonial fete here. In it 4,000 school children were the principal devotees.

Only one event of the day was arranged to take the wizard of Menlo Park from his winter home. That was a trip to the local telegraph office late today to touch a key to set in motion the machine of a new electric lighting plant in Bellingham, Wash.

At today's celebration an enormous birthday cake focused interest of the many who today paid Mr. Edison homage. The cake was lit by 81 electric candles.

It Pays to Subsidize

While Eugene Howard is raising a sweet tenor voice, together with an eloquent gesture of the hand in the "Scandals," his comic brother, Willie, suddenly appears and quietly deposits a dollar bill in the outstretched palm. Willie calls this mighty payment "Eugene's hush money."

STAGE AND SCREEN

History Class Excused

At a recent matinee of "The Road to Rome," at the Wilbur, a chic sub-deb was overheard explaining how she had secured the afternoon off from history class. Her plea to the teacher ran: "The play tells how a Roman heroine saved Rome from Hannibal—but I didn't say 'and how.'"

DOWNTOWN ATTRACTIONS, UNRUFFLED BY INVASION, HOLD CHANGELESS FOR THE WEEK

A GOOD THING in a small bundle is discovered by Ray Dooley on "The Sidewalks of New York" (Colonial). It is a little pink snowflake known as a baby.

"LOOK PLEASANT," said the cameraman. "Yours Truly," piped Leon Errol and Evelyn Hoey in unison, "looking pleasant is the easiest thing we do; it comes natural." (Majestic)

MARGARET MANNERS, of the George White "Scandals" at the Shubert, has a fur coat, but she does not believe in bragging about it, that would be neither good manners nor good form. No, indeed!

PLAYING TO THE GALLERY? By their steady gaze in the general direction of the second balcony, you might guess that Charles Rogers and Clara Bow were interested in the "gate." "Wings" at the Tremont.

NO TURKISH BATH, no sir! Don't be misled by the robes. This is just a simple domestic scene in "The Road to Rome" at the Wilbur. Jane Cowl does her best to smooth the troubled brow of Ritchie Ling.

CHAMPS FLUTTER; MAGNATES WEEP

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

ACCEPTING an ancient proverb as one of life's fundamentals, the way of the transgressor is admittedly hard. But as the good old apothegms antedated the producer of musical comedy by something like two thousands of years, there is slight reason why Mr. Ziegfeld, on one hand, and Jacob J. Shubert, on the other, should be included in the distribution of platitudinous pity. Still, if a sinner plods a long, hard row of weeds and misery, what shall be said of the amiable gentlemen who strive to make light entertainment for the multitudes—and miss the mark by a misplaced adenoid or angry appendix?

IT is no secret that Mr. Ziegfeld, on his recent flutter in Boylston street, with Eddie Cantor and a reasonably new brand of Follies, missed making two ends meet by the slight margin of $500. Mr. Jolson might have done better for his own Mr. Shubert had the season's itinerary shunted that gay entertainer into these regions instead of starting him toward Florida and its tempting indolence. It may be remarked that Mr. Jolson's throat went lame in Syracuse—or some point in the Mohawk Valley—and the show closed, touching tenderly on Mr. Ziegfeld's misery, Eddie Cantor absorbed some acute pleurisy in Newark, one week after departing from Boston, and the Follies took an unexpected and sudden trip to Mr. Klein's already well stocked storehouse of deceased productions.

AND so it sifts down to hard boiled business. For what doth a profit a producer to spend $100,000 or $200,000 on a flimsy revue when the mainspring of the works may go rusty any minute. Mr. Ziegfeld, of course, made good returns for himself during the run of the Follies in Manhattan; Mr. Shubert probably did as well while Mr. Jolson sang mammy and other songs along Broadway. Yet both of these estimable entertainers developed aches and pains when the smaller cities of the hinterlands beckoned. Jolson passed out in upstate New York on his way to what might have been a complete conquest of the South, Cantor got as far as Newark and resigned in favor of his family physician.

WHEN two of the brightest Rotarians of the current theatre leave their employers flat on a back lot, what excuse is left for care free critics of lesser points to shout for a better drama and a wider distribution? Neither Mr. Ziegfeld nor Mr. Shubert could expect excessive returns from a tour of either Mr. Cantor or Mr. Jolson. Yet these active artists did offer something in progressive, or cumulative, entertainment that stirs encouragement among ambitious impresarios.

IT is easy to predict that Mr. Ziegfeld will still exist and purchase blue silk shirts in spite of Mr. Cantor's tender ribs; and Mr. Shubert will continue to wrestle with healthy income tax returns regardless of Mr. Jolson's swollen tonsils. But what about the minor victims—chorus people and lesser principals? These good and loyal disciples of the musical drama must toil in any case—even with sore throats or fallen arches.

A LINE THAT FAILED

During a recent performance of "Yours Truly" at the Majestic some of the stage crew were discussing the time when Leon Errol and Frank Tinney had a skit in a "Follies" in which Tinney portrayed a subway guard and Errol a passenger. The act had everything but a walloping finish gag, and the ending always left the audience cold. For weeks they strove to find a fitting smash ending. Finally, Tinney happily ejaculated that he had at last found a wow!

The next performance when the "wow" was to be used, Tinney failed to employ the gag. Errol whispered—

"Gimme the line! Quick! Gimme the line!"

But Tinney failed his partner, and they concluded their turn with the old, dead denouement. Back stage, the furious Errol was almost choking Tinney, when they were parted by stage hands.

"Please," sarcastically begged Leon, "Please, Frank, tell me why you didn't pull the new gag?"

"Good Lord!" panted Tinney, "I couldn't! The act from whom I swiped it was sitting in the first row!"

Brother of Harry Houdini, Hardeen, Comes to Hub

The man who knew the late Houdini better than any other was the man who was closest to him during his long and colorful life. This was his brother Hardeen, who is coming to the Keith-Albee, Boston, next week.

When Houdini's private secretary lay dying, the two agreed upon a grip which the secretary would give him if he were able to return to earth. A few moments before the man's death they rehearsed it, but Houdini never felt that grip again.

Hardeen

Houdini mystified the world and made a fortune doing it. His books on magic are authorities in sorcery, and his library, which completely filled seventeen shelves, lined the rooms in his home and was valued at half a million dollars. The library has been left to the Congressional Library in Washington on condition that it be called "The Houdini Collection."

In "Diplomacy"

HELEN GAHAGAN, with a truly all star cast, comes to the Colonial a week from Monday. In a revival of "Diplomacy."

"DIPLOMACY" IS COMING

Sardou's "Diplomacy," which nearly caused the failure of his candidature as one of the forty immortals of the Acadamie-Francaise, is the occasion during this very month of signal honor for the playwright in America. The stage is all set for the revival of "Diplomacy," to mark its Golden Jubilee Anniversary.

At the hands of George C. Tyler, who delighted the country last season with his presentation of "Trelawny of the 'Wells'," a cast has been assembled for an American and Canadian tour of "Diplomacy" which perhaps equals in ensemble any company previously seen in the play on this continent.

The names of Margaret Anglin, Frances Starr, William Faversham, "Cissie" Loftus, Tyrone Power and Charles Coburn and other high gods and goddesses of our theatre are invoked for the prosperity of this Sheridan memorial. "Diplomacy" will begin at the Colonial a week from next Monday.

"Diplomacy" was written and produced in France in 1877 and upon its success in Paris it was immediately transferred to the English and American stages and produced early in 1878. The celebrated Mr. and Mrs. Kendall played the leading roles in London. In this country the play was a vehicle for Rose Coghlan for many years.

SEGOVIA RETURNS

Segovia's return recital in Boston tomorrow evening, in Symphony Hall, will not be his last appearance in America, since the great guitarist has consented to make still another appearance in New York—his fifth in that city, before sailing for his native Spain next Wednesday.

Looking Ahead

FEBRUARY 20—
"Diplomacy, an all-star revival, at the Colonial.
"Gay Paree" at the Shubert.

FEBRUARY 27—
"The Three Musketeers" at the Colonial.
"The Baby Cyclone" at the Hollis.

MARCH 12—
American Opera Company, in repertoire, at the Hollis.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

COPLEY—"Yellow Sands," a play of English rural life by Eden and Adelaide Philpotts. Now on its second year in London. In the cast are E. E. Clive, who returns to duty after six weeks of travel and rest; Gaby Fay, May Edias, Elspeth Dudgeon, Rupert Lucas, Norman Cannon, Ralph Roberts, Vernon Kelso and David Clyde. Staged by Mr. Clive.

ST. JAMES—(Stock) "White Cargo," a drama of the tropics by Leon Gordon. The story deals with the depressing effects of too much high temperature on white men from the North. The principal feminine role of Tondeleyo, a half breed native, is taken by Clara Joel; the leading man in the cast are Walter Gilbert and Frank Charlton. Staged by Charles Schofield.

GAYETY—(Burlesque) "Saratoga Chips," a musical frolic. In the cast are Wayne McVeigh, an adept funster; Ed Hull, a dialectitian who specializes in Germanized English; William Roy, a leading man of good voice and nervous feet; also Fred Steger, Genevieve Phillips, Blanche Saure and Ina Blair. A neighbor chorus will do its chores.

Casals Plays at Harvard Glee Club Concert

Pablo Casals will be the soloist of the evening at the second concert of the season here by the Harvard Glee Club, to be given in Symphony Hall, next Thursday evening.

Casals and Alfred Holy, first harp of the Boston Symphony, will each provide obbligati for the Chorus whose program will include "Matona, Lovely Maiden," by Lassus; "I Hear a Harp," by Brahms; "The Nightingale," by Weelkes; "Salamalekum," by Cornelius; "Cantate Domino," by Hassler; "Requiem," by Faure; "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee," by Bach; "When His Loud Voice," by Handel; two English folk songs, and one Scotch folk song.

Bobbed Hair Old Practice, According to Ray Dooley

Bobbed hair new? Not according to a research made by Ray Dooley, petite star of "Sidewalks of New York," at the Colonial. She has traced it as far back as 1796.

French women, as might be expected, set the fashion for short hair nearly a century and a half ago, according to information collected by Miss Dooley, one of the first of stage personages to have her tresses trimmed.

In France in 1796 they wore their hair short in memory of the victims of the Reign of Terror, whose hair was always cut before their heads were placed under the guil-tine. The style was then known as "the sacrifice." Later it was called "Joan of Arc" style.

HODGE GONE A-GUNNING

WILLIAM HODGE brandishes a nasty cannon and threatens to use it, or them, on all the bad boys you find in "Straight Thru the Door." Mr. Hodge hates violence, but will use it if pushed too far. Careful!

"Leopard Lady"

ACTORS' FUND BENEFIT

The annual show that resident theater managers and visiting actors organize for the Actors' Fund Benefit always gathers on one bill a formidable array of arresting personalities.

This year's show comes somewhat earlier than usual. The Colonial Theater will again be used for the occasion, and the date is next Friday afternoon, February 17.

Everybody who appears at an Actors' Fund show is regarded as a star because in the work of this charity there is no class distinction. The bill this year will again be made up of the choicest hits and numbers from musical comedies and especially prepared sketches by the dramatic stars.

SYMPHONY GUEST

Bela Bartok, distinguished Hungarian composer and pianist, will be the guest of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the regular pair of Symphony concerts.

Film Futures

FEBRUARY 17—
Pola Negri in "The Secret Hour" at the Metropolitan.

FEBRUARY 18—
Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer" at the Modern and Beacon.

FEBRUARY 19—
Madge Bellamy in "Silk Legs" at the Keith-Albee Boston.
Richard Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid" at the Washington Street Olympia, Scollay and Fenway.

FEBRUARY 20—
John Gilbert and Jeanne Eagels in "Man, Woman and Sin" at Loew's State.

FEBRUARY 24—
W. C. Fields in "Tillie's Punctured Romance" at the Metropolitan.

POT LUCK IS SERVED AT THE 'MET'

This is the week, ladies and gentlemen, when you goes to the Metropolitan, you pays your money and you takes pot luck on the entertainment. The occasion is cryptically known as "Taka-Chance Week."

It seems to be a lively game discovered during the first exciting year at the "Met" when the big palace was brand new, and the press department was much overwrought by its manifold duties.

The busy gentleman of the typewriter whose job it is to write all kinds of stories on the show and keep the newspapers supplied with them, became greatly wearied so the story goes. To vary the monotony of his routine he suddenly decided to send out nothing at all for one whole week. Everything was to be a deep and dark secret. Try and get anything out of HIM! The press itself was pledged to secrecy.

As there is nothing so fascinating as mystery, the scheme worked or—to use the language of the showman—the public ate it up. It was firmly established as an annual observance—like ducking for apples on Halloween, for example.

Therefore, the current show at the "Met" is not to be divulged. It is to be supposed, of course, that a motion picture of some sort is on view, and that Gene Rodemich is still busy on stage running a presentation" of a certain nature.

But whether the screen star is Lon Chaney or Rin-Tin-Tin, or whether the stage holds Paul Whiteman or the Smith Brothers is something you may only know through some unsporting tattle-tale who just can't keep a secret. Are you curious? Then "Taka-Chance." After all you can't lose. We KNOW.

FLONZALEY CONCERT.

For its last concert of the season, the Flonzaley Quartet will play at Jordan Hall, on Wednesday evening, February 15, a program consisting of Brahms' B-flat major quartet, Beethoven's in C major, op. 59, No. 3, and the first quartet of Erwin Schulhoff.

NOVELTY IS SYMPHONY FEATURE

By MOSES SMITH

Things began in rather dull fashion at the first of this week's pair of Symphony concerts, but they ended with considerable excitement. The dullness was chiefly musical the excitement something else again.

To begin with the chronicles of this exceedingly unusual concert, not one number out of the five on the program had been heard previously at a Symphony concert. Of the two which were new to Boston entirely, one was being given its first performance anywhere—a third symphony for string orchestra by a little known Swiss composer of the day and year, Conrad Beck.

We can remember no novelty of recent times which has combined so much technical skill and intellectual mastery with lifelessness of themes as this most recent product of ultra-modern harshness. It is the sort of piece that professional musicians might enthuse over because of its display of the wonders of counterpoint, but which leaves a listener as such cold. Only the last movement—a remarkable fugue—seemed to have interesting subject-matter.

Holst's "Ode to Death" for chorus and orchestra was likewise disappointing. The piece seemed characterless, not sufficiently suggestive of text, and not too well set to English words, either.

After this boredom Rimsky-Korsakov's overture to "A Night in May" was greeted with huge enthusiasm, and the charming work merited the plaudits of the audience. So did Nina Koshetz, who followed with an aria from Borodin's "Prince Igor." Both in this number and in Schmitt's "47th Psalm" her beautiful voice delighted the ear.

In the Holst and Schmitt pieces the orchestra was assisted by the Cecilia Society chorus. The performance of the first was not striking, but the "Psalm" was beautifully done and made a vivid impression. It was therefore regrettable that a mild panic, caused by the burning odor from a fire in an adjoining building, should have marred the pleasure of the audience.

THEY'RE ON THE HOUSE!

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT to His Majesty, Bobby Mack is permitted to help himself to the royal perfectos. And there's free beer, too. Ramon Novarro in a generous mood as "The Student Prince" (Orpheum).

Ah, Them Were the Days!
Douglas Fairbanks, agile star of the "The Gaucho," at Loew's State, wants it distinctly understood that he has not forgotten the days when he played here at the Majestic in "As Ye Sow," a morality thriller of rural Cape Cod, in which he toiled for the vast sum of $25 weekly.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Hope Springs Eternal
John McGrail, whose interest in diet and the drama is second only to his zeal for the continuous advertisement of the Metropolitan, never wearies of writing good, clean plays. "I have written ten dramas," confesses honest Jawn, "none of them successful, but all striking."

FIGURES OF GAIETY AND GRIEF CAUGHT FROM CINEMA'S QUICK SHIFTING SCENES

PARTNERS! Douglas Fairbanks and Lupe Velez share a bit of rough going in "The Gaucho," at Loew's State. Miss Velez is new to the screen—and so are a number of Fairbanks' tricks.

"LOOK ME STRAIGHT IN THE EYE," pleads Ivan Mosjukine, "and say, oh, say that this uniform is not as funny as it seems!" But the expression of kindly pity reflected by Mary Philbin seems to say, "No, Ivan, it's funnier!"

"YOU'RE INVITED," urges this little lady, "to come to the Metropolitan this week and 'Take-Chance' on our show. You will see me on the screen and many others on the stage; can't I coax you?"

"OH, PLEASE," begs Lucilla Mendez, "take me to 'Coney Island.' I want to ride on the roller coaster and see the sights, and I'm just dying for a drink of pink lemonade!" But Rudolph Cameron is too civilized to yield. (Scollay.)

GERTRUDE ASTOR shrinks from someone's vulgar gaze in "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," at the Olympia and Fenway next week.

BOLD AUTHOR IN THE WOODPILE

By LEO GAFFNEY

A CREDIT line after the title of Douglas Fairbanks' new picture, "The Gaucho" at Loew's State next week, will read, "Story by Elton Thomas." From the same confidential source which keeps our office seething with Filmland's darkest secrets and our breakfast table garnished the year-round with those fresh, luscious, unwrinkled Sinsweet California prunes, (advt.) we learn that Elton Thomas is a fake—a modest fake albeit—but no less false; for he is none other than Doug himself!

* * *

NOW why should a great and popular movie star, with his eyes wide open and in full possession of all his faculties, deliberately pass up even so small a chance for personal advertisement? Publicity is everything to the film actor. With it, he may taste the delights of an existence that is buttered on both sides, so to speak; without it, his salary droops with his spirits and, sulkily, he just goes on living.

* * *

MR. FAIRBANKS is too smart a showman not to have a good reason for everything he does. And he also has taste. Not for modesty alone did he decline to use the pompous announcement, "Written and directed by Douglas Fairbanks" and display it on "The Gaucho's" playbill. Any other filmster, it is quite likely, would have done this if he could. Very well, but Mr. Fairbanks is NOT any other filmster.

* * *

THE screen's rollicking playboy holds his present high position because he knows his business. That is to say, he is something else besides just a good actor. He knows his abilities and how to make them count. He is a shrewd showman and he knows motion picture technique as few directors know it. Perhaps that is a side of himself he does not care to show to the public; perhaps he would prefer being known only as the prankish Frank Merriwell you see on the screen; perhaps this is the reason he had for concealing his authorship of "The Gaucho," and perhaps he knew we would get all worked up over it and break out with this notice, thus creating greater and more favorable publicity than ever. You never can tell!

BEFORE putting the typewriter to work on these lines we had every intention of saying a few cheerful words about Mary Philbin's matchless unbobbed hair, which ought to be the principal ornament of "Surrender" at the Keith-Albee Boston next week, but apparently the temptation to get in a dig at the chap who told us he couldn't "see" Douglas Fairbanks is too strong to resist. For this benighted creature we have the most profound pity—not unmixed with a little hearty detestation—because this is the same boy who can sit enraptured and applaud the originality of all the Handsome Harrys of the films who have copied every Fairbanksian trick as fast as they were turned out. There now, may a certain someone read this and cry himself to sleep for night, for all we care!

THE PAINT THAT KILLS

If you are addicted to the use of bronze paint as a vestment the experience of Irene Cornell, principal danseuse with "Gay Paree," which comes to the Shubert, Monday, may serve as a warning. Miss Cornell is the curvilinear coryphee who leads the "Zulu Passion Dance" in the Freres Shubert's Frenchy burlesquinade. Her sartorial adornment consists of a not too heavy covering of gold bronze—and little else. Last week Miss Cornell, wishing to save herself the trouble of a second application during the day, failed to remove the paint after a matinee. Retiring to her dressing room she decided to take a nap. Only prompt and heroic ministrations prevented the slumber from being her last.

Irene Cornell

Bronze paint when applied to the skin clogs the pores. Left on too long it will cause death. The dancer was discovered in a coma shortly before the evening performance by one of the matrons with the troupe. A stiff scrubbing brush, soap, a bucket of water and much elbow grease—then Irene returned to this world of sighs and tears.

Kin of Longfellow Plays Juvenile at St. James

Henry Wadsworth, juvenile of the St. James, has distinguished antecedents. He is kin of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and numbered among his ancestors the famous Capt Joseph Wade worth of Connecticut who as history tells, hid the charter of Connecticut in an oak tree.

The Wadsworth family confidently expected that he would follow his father, grandfather, and his uncles in the profession of law, but the young man refused to be attracted by any of Gladstone's theories.

When he was sent to the University of Kentucky he insisted on spending most of his time attending and acting in—the Romany theater, a community playhouse.

Henry Wadsworth

Company as Gilda in "Rigoletto," opposite the lamented Caruso.

For the past five years she has devoted her time entirely to concert work.

Madame Conde, who is the daughter of the late Dr. Coburn, the famous Egyptologist, not only possesses a coloratura voice of unusual clearness and beauty, but she also has rare charm of manner.

FILM FARE FOR NEW WEEK

LOEW'S STATE—Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho" (first run), an original screen story by Elton Thomas. Romantic drama of a South American cowboy, a marauding fellow, made to behave through the power of love. The cast features Lupe Velez, Eve Southern, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Michael Vavitch, Nigel de Brulier and Albert McQuarrie. Direction by F. Richard Jones. A United Artists' picture. On stage, Ray Fagan and his band.

NEW BOSTON—(Starting tomorrow) Mary Philbin and Ivan Moskujine in "Surrender" (first run), adapted from the story, "Lea Lyon," by Alexander Brady. Drama of wartime Russia in which a melting heroine is sacrificed to save a small Galician town. Cast includes Otto Mathieson and Nigel de Brulier. Edward Sloman directed. A Universal picture. Also vaudeville.

SCOLLAY—(Starting tomorrow) Lois Wilson in "Coney Island" (first run), adapted from the story by Joseph O'Neil. Melodramatic thriller of exciting events on America's great playground. Cast includes Lucilla Mendez, Rudolph Cameron and Eugene Strong. Ralph Ince directed. Also vaudeville.

OLYMPIA—(Starting tomorrow) "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" (first run), screen play by Al Cohn. Being the adventures of the well-known Jewish-Irish film folk who, this time, become tangled with the Folies Bergere, the Latin Quarter, etc. The cast features J. Farrell McDonald, George Sidney, Sue Carroll, Gertrude Astor, Charles Delany, Vera Gordon and Kate Price. William Beaudine directed. A Universal picture. Also vaudeville.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer in "The Student Prince," adapted from the popular play and operetta. Sweet-scented romance and first class sob-starter of these dear old days in Heidelberg. Jean and Hersholt and George K. Arthur also in the cast. Ernst Lubitsch directed. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Also vaudeville.

MODERN AND BEACON—(Starting today) Jacqueline Logan in "The Leopard Lady" (first run), adapted from the story by Edward Childs Carpenter. Mystery drama of circus life on the Continent. Alan Hale supports the star. Rupert Julian directed. A Pathe picture. Also Madge Bellamy in "Soft Living" (first run), screen play by Francis Agnew. Described as a "story of gold-digging wives." James Tinling directed. A William Fox picture.

FENWAY—(Starting today) "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" and "Coney Island."

Al Jolson to Be Seen and Heard in Motion Pictures

The announcement of Al Jolson's first motion picture appearance in "The Jazz Singer" at the Modern and Beacon on Saturday, February 18, has aroused much interest as the hitherto silent screen will be audible on this occasion. Mr. Jolson will be heard as well as seen in the important scenes and rendering his old favorites and new songs via vitaphones. It is reported that the magnetic Jolson personality registers as effectively in pictures as it does on the talking stage. This presentation is the first in which Vitaphone plays an important part in the telling of the pictured story. The scenario is based on the plot of the stage play of the same name and the production was directed by Alan Crosland.

Tut, Tut, Herbert, Also Fie!

When asked to supply a cheerful note on two of the young players in "Wings," Herb Hoagland, manager of the production, obliged with: "Charlie Rogers' Pa has yet to see his son on the screen—he lives in Kansas. Clara Bow is unique as an actress —she dislikes silk underwear."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Answer This One If You Can

As "The Leopard Lady," at the Modern and Beacon, Jacqueline Logan has to enter a cage with one of those large and ferocious felines. When a friend remarks on her courage Miss Logan replied, "Why not? If, as they say, all women are cats, what is strange about the species co-mingling?"

ROMAN ROBES TAKE MUCH MATERIAL

By LEE SIMONSON
Scenic Designer of "The Road to Rome" at the Wilbur

Why doesn't a modern man, draped in a sheet at a Turkish bath look as noble and dignified as an ancient Roman statue? That he does not, he and his streetcar fellow citizens will frankly admit. The reason, I discovered when I designed the costumes for "The Road to Rome," is not that modern man is, architecturally, less nobly proportioned than the old Romans.

Richie Ling, who plays Fabius Maximus in "The Road to Rome" at the Wilbur, is as modern as any of us—and look at him stalking about in his toga with all the grandeur that was Rome.

The fact is, an oblong sheet is not—and no matter how you pin it—cannot be made to look like a toga. For an authentic Roman toga you need plenty of cloth, far more than is contained in a sheet. Three times the height of the wearer is the rule. The garment is not cut along rectangular lines, but circular.

I searched many historical works before I located a drawing of a toga pattern, but at last I found one, a tiny one, which gave me the peculiar curve. Have plenty of cloth, get the correct curve in your cut and then, if you push your man's head through a hole a little off center, the robe will fall in the characteristic dignified folds we so admire in the Roman statues.

Clive Returns in Time to Appear in New Play

E. E. Clive

If E. E. Clive, of the Copley Theater, were associated with the baseball profession he would probably be called the greatest scout in the business. There is no actor-manager director now known in the American theater whose record for locating and producing worthwhile plays can compare with his. He has just returned from a flying trip to London where he has been negotiating for new material with the author of "The Ghost Train." Mr. Clive's London conference followed his unsuccessful attempt to suitably communicate with the author by radio phone. Mr. Clive resumes his place in the Copley cast next week with the production of "Yellow Sands."

"Wings" Seen and Praised by Many Army Experts

The striking tribute accorded to "Wings," by Commander Richard C. Byrd when he told Jesse L. Lasky that the war aviation, now pictured at the Tremont, was not only tremendously thrilling but technically perfect, is amplified by the opinions of three well-known American aviators who saw service in the World War. They agreed that "Wings" presents a faithful reproduction of war in the clouds, and praised the extremely difficult achievement of photographing war plane maneuvers.

Donald Hudson, D. S. C., Croix de Guerre, 35th Aero Squadron, 1st Pursuit Group, A. E. F., had this to say:

"The War Department and the Air Corps are to be congratulated for making "Wings" possible, and the Paramount Company for its excellent aerial photography. 'Wings' has undoubtedly some of the best photography of flying that has ever been taken."

ACES OF FINE ACTING IN "FOUR WALLS"

THE CASE OF ONE BENNY HOROWITZ is touchingly explained and beautifully enacted in "Four Walls" at the Hollis. Poor Benny, it seems, is the boy who makes the mistake of thinking he is in a thoroughly "free" country. But "framed" as he is, jail is his safest refuge.

Leatrice Joy Gets a Chance

By LOUELLA PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11—The Tiffany or Cartier (take your choice) cast of Leatrice Joy's next picture, "Man Made Women," is food for thought. Leatrice has been struggling with inferior stories and indifferent supporting casts for a long time. Now, right out of the blue California sky, comes the news that she will have H. B. Warner as her leading man, and Seena Owen and John Boles in important roles.

Paul Stein, who directed "The Forbidden Woman," one of the best De Mille dramas of last year, will have the directing honors.

H. B. Warner, cannot seem to stay away from the De Mille studios. He may leave for a picture or two, but he always returns. On the whole, he is a satisfactory player. His success depends largely upon the type of character he is asked to create. Some things he does well and others not so well.

Seena Owen, by the by, looks as if she had discovered some beauty secret. The stills they showed me at the De Mille studios of her are particularly lovely. She is going in for a different type of character and is doing it very well.

* * *

YOU wouldn't expect Milton Sills to ignore the vogue for underworld stories, would you? No actor in his right mind ever does turn his back on public demands. Mr. Sills next is "Night Birds," a crook story, originally titled "The Hawk."

First National expects to exploit it as one of its big productions, and for that reason Ben Christianson, former De Mille director, has been engaged to wield the megaphone.

So far it has not been decided whether or not Doris Kenyon will play opposite her husband. The question seems to be as to whether or not Doris is the type. From all I can gather the girl in the story belongs to the underworld, and no one by any stretch of the imagination could picture Doris Kenyon as anything but the epitome of refinement.

ALICE JOYCE had every expectation of finishing "The Rising Generation," for the Westminster Company in London, and hurrying home to the U. S. A. But she is being invited to remain longer, nay, she is being urged with a very pleasant contract and another picture which will give her an opportunity to do her dramatic best.

Home looms tempting in the background, and New York beckons invitingly, so that Miss Joyce has not yet given her decision. She usually manages to keep busy in this country, and most people are agreed it doesn't pay to stay too long. Too many things happen.

WHAT can a girl do when she has two very good jobs offered her and a desire to go abroad. If she likes her art she sticks to her job. If she doesn't she crosses the pond.

Jane Winton isn't leaving this week for Europe. Not by a jugful. With a chance to wear a blonde wig in "The Yellow Lily," Billie Dove's next picture, and an opportunity to play in another production, she has decided to postpone her trip to the other side until April.

You can always go abroad, figures Jane, but you can't always get the sort of a part you want in the movies. Wise girl, Jane!

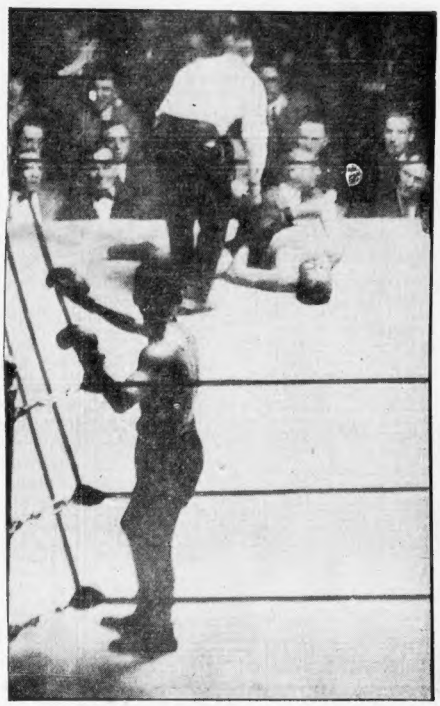
A PUNCH FROM THE PENINSULA. Joe Kelley will receive his toughest assignment since his attempted fistic comeback Monday night when he meets Joe Monte at the Boston Arena for the light heavyweight championship of New England.



BUD TAYLOR DOWN FOR COUNT in seventh round of the Taylor-Sangor fight at the Coliseum, Chicago. Ten thousand fight fans saw battle. Taylor claimed a foul, but Referee Collins declared the blow fair. Taylor was given a five-minute rest, but failed to go on with the fight after the period ended and Sangor was given the victory on a technical knockout.

"DID YOU EVER RIDE A BIKE?" This old song hit will ring out at the 50th annual dinner of the Boston Bicycle Club at the B. A. A. tonight. "Doc" Kendall, above, has been a member of the club for 42 years. He will preside at the dinner tonight. There will be 65 of the 75 members at the reunion.

PREPARING FOR THE UNKNOWN. Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion of the world, is shown taking part of his daily workout at Florida. Gene makes it his business to keep in condition at all times. Although his next opponent has not been selected, Tunney is spending his vacation training. He seems ready to enter the roped square on two weeks' notice.

MONTE AND HAMBONE READY

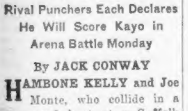
Rival Punchers Each Declares He Will Score Kayo in Arena Battle Monday

By JACK CONWAY

HAMBONE KELLY and Joe Monte, who collide in a ten-round bout at a Suffolk A. A. show at the New Boston Arena on Monday night, are carefree fighting men. Each declares he will win by a knockout.

The ordinary ring skirmish usually produces only one knockout a. the best. There have been a few cases of where two sockwaves hit the ring and both heads passed out of the picture. Such an event is likely to occur on Monday night if Hambone and Monte are to live up to their prebattle predictions.

The rival knock 'em dead artists were to bury the last of their sparring partners today. Hambone has been doing his heavy canmendous at Dan Toland's gym, while Monte has been cook of the walk at Harry Kelley's Flatiron Park.



Jack Conway.

Experts on condition who have given the rival punchers the well known up and down have pronounced them in perfect condition.

It is probably the first time in Hambone's career that he will enter the well known pink. He has trained more carefully for Monday night's quarrel than for any tussle in which he has ever engaged.

Monte has always been a student of physical condition. This is one of the reasons why the Brockton citizen has been able to pile up such a flock of victories in New York rings.

Hambone and Monte are both aggressive, two-fisted fighters, and as a result, the fans should witness one of the best action battles of the indoor season when the two enter into action in their frolic for the light heavyweight championship of New England.

Joe Tavelleri of Cambridge and Eddie Mahoney of Roxbury will clash in the semifinal of eight rounds. They'll be the usual peppery preliminary bout.

ROCKY STONE and Lou Bogash have been signed for one of the three-round bouts which will be staged at the smoker of the St. Thomas Athletic Association at St. Thomas Church Hall, Jamaica Plain, on next Thursday night. Rocky and Bogish have an act of their own which is a corker.

Bossy Gillis informs me he will act as referee of this bout. This should give it the proper setting.

Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Honeyboy Finnegan, Al Mello, Billy Murphy, Sammy Fuller, Red Chapman, Johnny Vacca, Eddie Kane, Harry Soo, Henry Lamar, Al Delfont, Jr., and a flock of other pugilistic stars will be present to do their stuff. It is the biggest show of its kind ever put on in Boston, and it sure to attract a capacity crowd.

MANY of the fans who witnessed the Finnegan-Flowers bout are of the opinion that the Dorchester lightweight was entitled to the decision. Honeyboy had a commanding lead at the end of the eighth session. Many ringsiders contend that Flowers' fast finish was not sufficient to cut down the Honeyboy's early lead.

The injuries which Finnegan received in his left hand and back will keep him on the inactive list for two months. At the end of that time Jack Carroll says Honeyboy will be prepared to step to bat and knock Flowers for a loop.

It is also likely that Honeyboy will sign for bouts with Sammy Fuller and Red Chapman, provided the weight for the matches is made 130 pounds.

Finnegan is one of the most popular boxers in the Hub at the present time. This is due to the fact he has always given the cash customers a run for their jack.

Amateur Stars in Dilboy Show

Entries continue to pour into the Dilboy Post, for their amateur boxing show which will be held in the Knights of Columbus Hall, Somerville, next Thursday evening. Competition will be held in the following open classes: 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight.

Some of the well known boxers already entered are, for 126 pounds class, Johnny Delano, Boston; 135 pounds, George Donahy, Boston Y. M. C. A., Edward Lee, Cambridge; 147 pounds, Jimmie Hollis, Mission Square A. A., Somerville. Mike Horiuski, East Boston; 160 pounds, Tom Stanley, North End; George Jessin, Charlestown; heavyweights Tom Miller and Tom Upton, both from Roxbury.

RUNYON Says—

By DAMON RUNYON

HOWEVER promising a young exponent of The Manly Art of Scrambling Ears may be, he can always smear his promise by his own indiscretions.

A youth may today have all the finger prints of a future Dempsey or Tunney, and tomorrow he may have suddenly acquired a yen for gin, late hours, writing love letters, dancing the Baltimore, and what haven't you. And away goes his promise.

I do not mean to infer that any one of these passions alone, except the gin, will destroy a young man's promise. For instance, the dancing of the Baltimore, the terpsichorean invention of Mr. Danny Healy, might night of itself prove fatal.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Healy devised the Baltimore as an artful aid to health and complexion, and maybe to the jovial uplift for all I know, and as such it may be highly recommended. But I doubt if Mr. Healy would advise promising young gladiators to indulge too freely in the Baltimore after Curfew. It is very wearing on the old plates of meat, as we say at the club, meaning the face.

I could name a dozen gents of the past ten years in the Manly Art who might have been where Mr. Gene Tunney is today, heavyweight champion of the world, and all readied up for a few offhand remarks on Will Shakespeare, if they had had half of Mr. Tunney's stability of character, abstemiousness, and desire to get ahead.

They started out with far more pugilistic promise than Mr. Tunney. In truth, Mr. Tunney didn't have much promise at all at the beginning of his pugilistic career. He was just a fair sort of boxer, no better, Harry Soo, Henry Lamar, Al Delfont, Jr., and a flock of other pistol fingers will be present to do their stuff. It is the biggest show of its kind ever put on in Boston, and it sure to attract a capacity crowd.

A PROPHET'S HONOR.

Thus when you single out some promising young fighter, especially one in his early twenties, and predict a great future for him, you are treading on uncertain ground, as I have reason to know.

I have made that prediction for a large number of young men in the past, in the flush of admiration over some display of prowess, but I didn't allow for human frailty and weak clim. A few of them came through on my prediction, but none of the less quite fad.

Mr. Tunney, and before him Mr. Jack Dempsey are among those who would have given me standing as a prophet if any of my readers could have remembered that I told you so. But readers commonly recall only the errors of a prophet, so naturally I get no credit for Mr. Tunney or Mr. Dempsey. I am more apt to have such as Mr. Jim Maloney assigned to me. But how could I know about Mr. Jim Maloney's chin?

Still, I be with no lack of the old confidence that I offer a new prediction against the sinister possibilities of the future. Mr. Tunney, love letters, and even the Baltimore, aforesaid, which is that a powerful young exponent of the manly art there will be that surly haired blonde Bohemian out of Dayton, Ohio, who is known as Joe Sekyra.

I even place him among the vague possibilities of this year, though I am inclined to think that Mr. George Tex Rickard and Mr. Gene Tunney have their program so well mapped out that there is now little chance of a change. But the blonde Bohemian, bar the terrors I have described, ought to be in there in 1929.

MR. RICKARD'S CAMPAIGN.

It is my opinion that Mr. Dempsey's "retirement" was announced merely to give the folks a chuckle, but more to keep alive the early Mr. Rickard's bait to the Messrs. Delaney, Heeney, Sharkey, Risko, et al, the possibility of a match with Mr. Tunney.

Thus when the Delaney-Heeney and Sharkey-Risko matches have been concluded, and the winners thereof have fought it out to the great profit of Mr. Rickard, I think you find Mr. Tunney and Mr. Dempsey repeating their celebrated act along in September.

I am quite sure that Mr. Tunney will make but one fight in 1928, and where can he find a softer opponent than Mr. Dempsey? Echo seems to answer, where? Mr. Tunney can always out-gallop Mr. Dempsey, and I'm sure that he can make more money with Mr. Dempsey than with any member of Mr. Rickard's favorite quartet, even if it happens that some of them manages to come through that oft-repeated elimination process only partly eliminated.

They will all have passed from the pugilistic picture by 1929—Dempsey, and all the rest of the glove-dented gladiators now rated in the front line, and the youngsters will get their chance—Sekyra, the blond Bohemian, Kevin Scharf, the sailor boy, Ted Sandwina, the German-American, English Phil Scott, Benny Touchstone, the and Southerner, Armand Emanuel, the Hebrew marvel, Knute Hansen, the melancholy Dane, Pierre Charles, the bouncing Belgian and all the rest.

And my guess now is that Sekyra is the coming sensation of the pugilistic land, if he doesn't do something to hend himself off.

FIGHTS AS LIGHT HEAVY.

Just turned twenty-one, Sekyra is a thoroughly seasoned fighter, with tough battles with such as John Risko, Sully Montgomery, George LaRocco, Joe Lohman, Art Weigand and Yale Okun, and a score of others behind him.

His managers have challenged for the light heavyweight title, because Sekyra easily makes 175 pounds, but I think they err in not declaring him among the heavies at once. His tremendous speed would make any of the big fellows look as if they were standing still. And in a few months Sekyra is bound to beyond the light heavyweight limit.

He is meeting Al Lippe's Philadelphia light heavy, George Genaus, at the St. Nicholas Rink tonight, and Genas ought to furnish some line on Sekyra's ability to "take it," anyway. Genas is a terrific puncher with his right hand—when he lands the right. He was one of the few men in the light heavyweight division to tackle "Young Poison," as the gymnasium sharpshooters call Sekyra.

A lot of things, including a couple of bald defeats, can happen to Sekyra in the next year, but by and large he seems just now to approximate that young, strong, ambitious young fellow the fistic world has been expecting to come looming along any minute to slug his way to the big title as Mr. Jack Dempsey did back in 1919.

Dean Tank Team Wins

Franklin, Feb. 11.—Dean Academy swimming team defeated Providence Y. M. C. A., 33 to 26, in the Dean pool. Ingram for Dean and Driscoll for Providence were the stars.

TRIPLE TIE IN SCHOOL HOCKEY

As a result of the schoolboy hockey games played this morning at the Arena there is a triple tie in the league standing. English, Dorchester and Latin are tied for first place, each having a total of 13 points to their credit.

The English high sextet lost their first game today, being defeated by Dorchester by the score of 2 to 1. Although the winning sextet have lost no games this season they have been in three tie contests.

The league season has three more weeks to run.

Commerce, Trade and Needham High Schools were among the winners. Commerce shut out Trade 2 to 0, while Needham scored two points, defeating Brighton. Jamaica Plain stopped East Boston 2 to 0.

The Brighton team, however, played in double-header. They played Hyde Park in one game, which ended in a scoreless tie, and were somewhat winded when they tackled Needham.

Summary:

Dorchester 2, English 1.
Latin 5, Mechanic Arts 0.
South Boston 7, Charlestown 1.
Hyde Park 0, Brighton 0.
Commerce 2, Trade 0.
Needham 2, Brighton 0.
Jamaica Plain 2, East Boston 0.

22 Stewards Named for Dog Show

Men prominent in society are included among the 23 stewards announced today by the Eastern Dog Club for its show in Mechanics Building, Feb. 20-23. Heading the list as chief steward is Clement M. Burnhome of Boston and Newburyport, vice-president of the club.

The remaining stewards will be President T. D. Smith of Weston, George West of Chestnut Hill, Bayard Warren of Dedham Crossing, N. F. Emmons of Hingham, W. B. Rogers of Sherborn, Dexter Stevens of Edmond, R. L. Hubert B. Brown of New York City, W. B. Emmons, Albert Gelger, Prescott Bigelow, G. H. Burrett, John Watson, R. W. Means, Mrs. W. F. Livermore, Oliver Turner and Andrew Tidel of Boston, Kenneth Clement of Haverhill, Leon Mullen of Lowell, F. T. Eskrigge of Newton, Frederic Cadwell of Brookline and J. J. O'Callaghan of West Roxbury.

Braves May Get Catcher Henline

New York, Feb. 11 (I.N.S.)—"Butch" Henline, Brooklyn catcher, may be traded to the Boston Braves, according to a rumor in circulation here today. The Braves need a catcher badly and Brooklyn's other two receivers, Charlie Hargrave and Hank Deberry, have signed 1928 contracts.

Tex Robins have not yet flown into the fold. They include Rleonda and Taylor, infielders, and Statz and Tyson, outfielders.

Vitale Beats Holms

Gerry Vitale of Beverly was awarded the decision over Eddie Holms of Providence at the end of 10 rounds in the main bout of the Salem A. A. weekly show held at the North Street rink.

Frank Provencher of Three Rivers, Canada, was awarded the decision over Ted Reynolds of Beverly in the eight rounder. Eddie Zine of Boston scored a technical knockout over Young Sharkey of Everett in the first round. Eddie Hedges of Lynn knocked out Johnny Sinclair in the first round.

Czechs Checked by Lone Canadian Star

St. Moritz, Switzerland, Feb. 11 (A.P.)—"Referee, Referee," was the shout of the Czechoslovakian hockey team as they took the ice on the Olympic rink yesterday afternoon to practice.

There was no referee present.

Finally a tall, lanky man volunteered to act. The team practiced a few minutes when the self-appointed referee ruled off two hockey players for intensive interference.

"Let me show you," said the referee. Then gathering up a stick he ran the entire length of the Czechoslovakian defense and scored six goals in rapid succession as the bewildered team looked on.

"Who's this man?" asked Jaroslaw Trottlir, the Czechoslovakian goal keeper, just as another speedy shot found the net.

"Dave Trottler of Canada," was the reply from the sidelines.

"Then heaven help America," the goal keeper replied, apparently not aware that the United States was not entered in the Olympic trophy matches.

SEPPALA WINS SECOND LEG IN SLED RACE

Wolfeboro, N. H., Feb. 11 (AP)—Leonhard Seppala won the second leg of the second dya's run of the New England sled dog race. His elapsed time for the 114 corrected mile run from Laconia was three hours, 40 minutes, 29 seconds. He will be pulled in here some of the other drivers were in sight.

Emil St. Goddard, who had been Seppala's nearest competitor yesterday and in the first part of today's run, found the down hill runs with Alton and Wolfeboro too much for his dogs and dropped behind rapidly.

At Clay Point, eight miles from the finish line, Seppala's elapsed time was 2:07 and Earl Ridore was second in 3:24. Shorty Russick had made the first 26 miles in 3:33 while St. Goddard, Mrs. R. Peet Burton, Walter Channing and E. P. Clark were strung out behind in that order.

POLO RIVALS TO FIGHT IT OUT

Devotees of pony polo who visit the Commonwealth Armory this evening will witness a battle between the two leading Army teams this vicinity, namely the 101st Field Artillery and the 110th Cavalry.

Bitter rivals for years these trios will fight it out tonight for the championship of the Army polo league contest, and a large crowd is sure to turn out for the fans know full well what to expect when these fast riding teams are mounted.

The Artillery will rely on their veteran trio of Col. Jan Needham, No. 1; Major Charles Furber, No. 2, and Lieut. Theodore Pittman at back.

Fueling this trio will be Private John Walsh, Lieut. Roland Mangini and Private William Cavanaugh.

In the other match of the double-header the Battery A trio led by Sam Hopkins will play the Harvard freshmen.

The Battery lineup will be Robert Wood, Henry Hopkins and Ralph Graves. The Crimson Yearlings will have their regular trio mounted, Jenkins, Gerry and Clark.

B. U. Riflemen Score 1,275 Points

The Boston University rifle team scored 1,275 points in its intercollegiate shoot with Norwich University team. S. B. Linehan made the best score for the Terriers, getting a high mark of 268.

Shooting was in three positions—standing, sitting and prone. The individual scores of the B. U. team was as follows: S. B. Linehan, 268; V. Coyne, 261; E. H. Small, 251; J. O. Shaw, 248, and F. Schaefer, 247.

B. U. Faces Bowdoin Today

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 11—Bowdoin will have an opportunity to avenge its football defeat at the hands of Boston University earlier in the season when the two sextets meet here this afternoon.

Coach Houser's sextet has the added incentive in the last hap that the advantage it will have by playing on natural ice, hopes to turn the tables on the visitors.

The Terriers have lost only two games this year and they were to Yale and Harvard, the two best college sextets in the country. The Terriers are strong in reserve material than the home five. Coach Houser is at a disadvantage insofar as substitutes are concerned.

Lassman Out of Football for Good

Al Lassman, captain and giant tackle of New York University, a Cambridge boy, probably has played his last game of football. The broken ankle he suffered last fall was far more serious than was at first supposed.

Still hobbling around on crutches, Lassman only recently had to submit the damaged limb to another operation.

PELTZER AND HAHN TO RACE IN NEW YORK

Chicago, Feb. 11 (A.P.)—The hope of track enthusiasts for a mile race between Lloyd Hahn of the Boston Athletic Club and Dr. Otto Peltzer of Germany will be realized on February 29.

Following his defeat by Ray Conger of the Illinois Athletic Club in the 1000-metre race last night, Dr. Peltzer announced he had received permission and had accepted an invitation to compete against Hahn in the mile run at the Knights of Columbus games at New York on that date.

It will be his third and probably his final race during his present American invasion. And it will give him an opportunity of erasing the pain of his defeat by Conger.

Dr. Peltzer plans to remain in Chicago until next week training intensively for the race with the speedy Nebraskan.

Conger Beats Peltzer in Chicago Race

Chicago, Feb. 11.—It took a long, lean, hungry looking fellow from out in Iowa, where the tall grass and many other things grow—Ray Conger—to run the mighty German, Dr. Otto Peltzer, into the ground.

Conger beat the flying German decisively in the 1,000-metre run that featured the eleventh annual Illinois Athletic Club handicap track and field meet at the Ridins Club here.

Conger was rated a rank outsider by the majority of the experts and it is doubtful if you could have wagered one thin dime on his chances against the German.

It was Peltzer's second competitive appearance in the United States and his first defeat. The Germans apparently was in good form but he just didn't have the intestinal fortitude to beat off Conger's relentless drive.

The poor condition of the track was reflected in the other events. No records were broken and the time in most of the events were poor. Frank Sweeney, former University of Illinois star of Chicago A. A., tied the world's record of 7 3-5 seconds to win the 60-yard low hurdles. This was the only time performance worthy of note.

Jole Ray, also of the Central A. A. U., early this week, did not compete as scheduled.

English Swamps Latin on Track

English High continued its sweeping drive in the running events of the dual meet with its old rival, Latin school, at the East Armory, and won the meet by the score of 374 1-2 to 56 2-3.

The senior "300" was the best battle of the afternoon. Sullivan of English High took the lead at the start and set a lively pace throughout the race, but cracked ten feet from the tape and was passed by four runners.

Norton of English finally captured the race. Capt. Beveridge of Latin was second.

King of Latin won a brilliant race in the 600-yard run in last hap sprint that left the field, with the exception of his teammate, Dolan, far in the rear.

The 1000-yard run was expected to be the feature race of the day, but Coach Joe "Daley" refused to enter his star and captain, George Daly, in the race, because of the relay finals which were being held. Murphy of Latin easily won the race.

MR. BOSTON wheeled up in front of the office on an old tandem which looked a little the worse for wear.

"How come?" asked the traffic cop who had a bundle of tags under his arm.

"This tandem has been parked in better streets than this and has yet to be tagged," laughed the veteran. "I promise you that if you place any decorations on my chariot that I'll present the tandem and the tag to you."

"I don't tag bikes or baby carriages," snapped back the traffic cop. "The same goes for kiddy cars, toy trucks and golf bags."

"Then you're not a real traffic cop," piped the veteran.

Much relieved Mr Boston adjusted his bicycle togs and breezed into the sporting department.

"How come?" demanded Myles MacSweeney as he gazed at the scenery.

"This explains everything," replied Mr. Boston as he handed over a poem which read as follows:

Fifty years of exercise,
Fifty years of fun,
Fifty years of ups and downs.
But happy, every one.
Fifty oh-be-joyful years
Since eighteen seventy-eight;
Some of us rode on bicycles,
Some of us rode on skates,
Some of us sported tandems then,
But nobody motor cars.
We pedalled, pushed, perspired and pumped,
And walked up many a hill,
But it did us good, as we knew it would,
And we wish we were doing it still.

"GET the big idea?" queried Mr. Boston. "The Boston Bicycle Club will hold its fiftieth annual dinner at the B. A. A. tonight. Capt. Walter G. Kendall will be master of ceremonies in the absence of President Quincy Kilby who got tangled up in a taxi accident in France last Summer.

"The Boston Bicycle Club is the oldest organization of its kind in the United States. I find that all of its charter members have pedalled out of this world.

"Justice Joshua Dean has the longest membership record. He will round out his fiftieth year with this organization in April.

"THE Boston Bicycle Club originally was located on Boylston st. It outgrew these quarters. Its members then organized the B. A. A.

"The Boston Bicycle Club is associated with the Pickwick Club of London, one of the oldest sport organizations in the world.

"Sir J. C. Percy, noted Dublin (Ireland) publisher, is one of the members of the Boston organization. Other prominent members of the local club are William V. Burt, who now lives in South America; Jenry Crother of Philadelphia, George P. Young, W. L. Shearer, Postmaster Rodd M. Baker and Walter S. Swan, the latter residents in Dorchester and has celebrated his eighty-third birthday. He will be the oldest person at tonight's dinner. He'll roll up to the B. A. A. in an auto instead of on a tandem.

"Any of the oldtimers who did any pedalling will be welcome at the dinner. There'll be plenty of groceries, while everybody will have a dozen or so interesting stories to tell."

PASSING THE PUCK

By Bill Grimes

WITH five of its six clubs separated by only ten points, the race for the Canadian-American League championship promises to be as thrilling as last season, with the final results in doubt until the very end of the schedule. All the teams have been strengthening and it will be a fight to the final whistle.

The Tigers have been out in front all season and their tenacity has won them a large following. Regardless of the many injuries, the Tigers have refused to quit, instead they have been turning in their best performances when the odds were heavy against them.

The University Club is going to make a trip to the Maritime Provinces next week. The University Club has been unable to book games here, so it was decided to take the "bull by the horns" and go to Eastern Canada. Having defeated the Toronto Grads, the University Club should prove a fine attraction. In spite of the fact that it will be impossible for some of the stars to make the trip, the University Club should have little trouble defeating the best in the lower provinces.

Boston University is another local team which is planning to exhibit its wares in Nova Scotia. Arrangements are now underway for the Terriers to play three games "down home" and, like the University Club, Coach Gaw's club will make things interesting for their opponents.

The Tigers have 12 more games to play in the Canadian-American League. Seven of these contests will be decided at the Arena, and if the Tigers can break even for the remainder of the season, there is every reason to predict that they will finish at the top of the heap. Springfield must win eight of their 14 games to top the Tigers, figuring the latter team to win only six games, while Providence and New Haven must turn in ten victories to be up with the present leaders.

Although he has received little credit for his work this season, Bartley Frost of the Tigers is a very valuable asset to the team. He is one of the best defensive forwards in the Can.-Am. League. "Frostie" has halted every one of those scoring right wingers, such as Jack Gagnon, Frock Lowery, Clukker White, Charlie LaRoche, Charlie Cahill and "Goldie" Goldsworthy. He occupies the identical position with the Tigers that Percy Galbraith does with the Bruins, but, like the clever Bruin, has been overlooked because he is not good crazy.

Dr. Tommie Richards of Harvard is treating "Ponzi" Contant for a leg ailment. "Ponzi" goes over to the Locker Building three or four times every week for treatment, and he is tendered as much care and attention as though he was a student of the University.

Some of the youngsters who are tried out by N. H. E. teams and then sent to a minor league for seasoning handicap themselves by attempting to be facile, ready and ready for all emergencies. An early cure may be hard to take, but it is the best thing for these boys in the long run. One may be cured at the Arena this evening.

With the possible exception of Yale, Harvard is far superior to any team in the college ranks. Although the Crimson was defeated by McGill, it is doubtful if the Montreal collegians are capable of repeating the feat they accomplished in New York. The Harvard-Yale series will be a dazzler and seats for all games will be at a premium.

Amateurs Clash in St. Joe's Tourney

With all the topnotch amateur boxers in line, the weekly amateur boxing tournament of the St. Joseph's T. A. A. scheduled tonight at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin sq., looms up as one of the most important events of the season.

With bouts in two movies classes topping the bill, followers of the simon pures are looking forward to some real action.

GREEN SWIMMER SETS NEW MARK

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 11—Sid Hazelton's swimming team weakened by the loss of McCaw, backstroke star, and Maden, diver, scored a 36-to-29 win over Springfield College here, due to the sensational work of Capt. Bryant, who won both dashes and set a new record of 2:44 seconds in the 50-yard swim.

In the dive, Leigh, Dartmouth, won first place, and Hubbard, Dartmouth, finished second. Burke of Springfield was the individual star of the meet.

SIX STAR QUARTER-MILERS MEET IN N. Y. TRACK MEET

New York, Feb. 11 (INS)—Six of America's best quarter-milers will compete tonight in the suburban quarter at the eighteenth annual indoor meet of St. Johnny track and field games in Brooklyn. They were: Joe Tierney, Jimmy Burgess, Vincent Lally, Frank A. Barnes, former Holy Cross star, Ray Barbuti of Syracuse and Eddie Hector of Georgetown.

Lincoln and the Negro

By the Rev. Egbert C. McLeod, Pastor of the Colored Congregation of Morgan Memorial Church of All Nations

There is only one genuinely great strain in human blood, the Common Strain. The real rulers and leaders of the people are not generally found in the gilded palaces and royal bathouses of the world, but usually appear as wild flowers growing in the highways and hedges.

The true priests and prophets of all ages have usually been men "after the order of Melchizedek, King of Salem, without father, without mother, without descent."

Not Americans alone but men of all races and all climes, especially lovers of democracy will pay tribute tomorrow not to a King or Emperor, not to a missionary or reformer, but to a man who came like "a root out of dry ground without form or comeliness," a man who knew what the people wanted, loved and feared better than any other man of his age. A man who fulfilled the biblical injunction that "whosoever will be great let him serve."

The memory of Abraham Lincoln is written not only in marble and stone but it has made an imperishable impress upon the hearts and minds of 12,000,000 Negro Americans whose presence as a minority group is a challenge to America's Christianity.

A universal recognition and application of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, the Sermon on the Mount, the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule would soon usher in the "Kingdom Era" from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand.

The mechanics of drawing up a document, the attaching of official signature, seals and stamps aided and abetted by the legislation of government have never completely freed any race.

Freedom goes deeper. Legislation will alleviate, but it cannot and will not free us from religious bigotry, racial prejudice, discrimination and intolerance.

The American Negro optimistically faces the future. Sixty-five years of unparalleled progress and advancement, economically, intellectually and spiritually, have given him undaunted courage to achieve greater things and a profound confidence in his own ability.

Correct Manners

By MRS CORNELIA SEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. SEECKMAN:

I have read your articles faithfully, and I have learned a great deal about a great many things which I have always wondered about. Now I need your advice dreadfully. Will you help me?

My sister lives with us and plans to be married in church. As our father is dead, we thought my husband could give her away. Is this right?

I do not know the form of the processional. I have read your articles enough so that I ought to know by this time, but I want to be sure. Is the groom and the best man stand in front, as the bride, ushers, and bridesmaids walk down the aisle? And do the ushers march in first, then the maids of honor and then the matron of honor alone, and then the bride and my husband, who is going to give the bride away?

Could the bride come down the aisle alone in the above procession, and not have any one give her away? Would this be proper?

Please also advise me about the recessional. THANK YOU.

I SEE that you have read the column more carefully even than think, for you have remembered just what I have said on the processional. Yes, the groom and the best man stand at the front as the processional comes down the aisle. At the first notes of the wedding march the clergyman comes from the vestry and walks to the front of the church, then turns and faces the assembled guests. Directly follow ing him are the groom and his best man, the groom perhaps a step ahead of the best man. They take their places at the right of the chancel steps, in a church that has a chancel, or to the right of the pulpit in a church that hasn't. They, too, turn in the direction from which the bridal procession is to come.

At those same important first notes of the wedding march the wedding processional starts from the vestibule. First come the ushers, walking together, two by two. Then the bridesmaids, walking together, two by two. Then the maid of honor, walking alone. Then the bride and whoever is to give her in marriage for alone, if she prefers.

It is in excellent taste for the bride to have your husband present her in marriage, if she has no brothers older than she, especially if she has not an older married brother. It would be especially appropriate for your husband to give her in marriage since the bride has made her home with you. It would be the most charming compliment that she could pay your husband.

The bride would walk down the aisle unaccompanied? and this is in perfectly good taste, if she prefers, but I am sure that she will take advantage of your husband's courtesy and invite him to present her in marriage. Or if she wished she might walk down the aisle alone and then have you her representative in marriage at the altar. In this case, you remain in your seat in the first row on the left, and when the appropriate time comes in the ceremony, you step forward and present your sister in marriage.

DEAR MRS. SEECKMAN:

I am giving a hiking party and will have a number of boys and girls to introduce to the chaperons and am puzzled on how to begin the introductions. I am writing you for help. Shall I take each couple or each guest separately and introduce them to the chaperon or the chaperon to them? RICKY.

TAKE each guest or each couple to the chaperon and introduce them to the chaperon. Younger people are introduced to older people, and especially you must be careful about this in the case of chaperons, for they are being especially courteous in consenting to accompany you and your party.

When you introduce the girls to the chaperons, you may use the most formal formula for introductions, "Mrs. Towne, may I present Miss Grace Franklin?" or you may use the more informal form of mentioning only the names: "Mrs. Towne, Miss Grace Franklin," or you may use the informal, "Mrs. Towne, this is Miss Grace Franklin." Mention first the name of the older person.

When you introduce the boys to the chaperons, it would be best to use the formal and dignified words of the formal introduction: "Mrs Towne, may I present Mr. Anthony Case?" Or, if you wish to be informal, you may say, "Mrs. Towne, this is Mr. Anthony Case."

Advice to Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

TREAT HIM CORDIALLY

DEAR MISS F IRFAX:

I am sixteen years old and have been going with a young man a few years old r than myself for about three months.

Two weeks ago, when we were out together, he acted different. I thought I just imagined it, but as he has not called since, I don't know what to make of it. I have heard that he is in love with another girl. I love him dearly and hate to believe I've lost him. P ase tell me what to do. A READER.

WHEN you see him, treat him as sweetly as though nothing unusual had happened. Even though he has become interested, for the moment, in another girl, this need not disturb your friendship.

Until you finally fall seriously in love, my dear, and settle down to an engagement of marriage, it is natural and right that you should number many worthwhile young men on your list of friends, and that young men you know and like should cultivate the friendship also of other girls.

Youth Derides Authority

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

WHEN will youth learn to respect law and authority?

That is a question that is of deep concern to thousands of people. Here is the answer:

WHEN THEY HAVE LAWMAKERS AND AUTHORITIES WHO COMMAND THEIR RESPECT.

Respect is a thing that must be COMMANDED—not DEMANDED.

If the majority of office-holders would follow the example of a certain Supreme Court judge, then YOUTH would respect the law.

I lived next door to this said judge. I saw him at home sometimes I saw him on the street, quite often I saw him in his office at the State Capitol.

I saw him during sessions of the Legislature—calmly going about his work, when many officials were engaged in swapping influence to get this, that or the other.

I saw him during a heated election campaign, when a loud-talking hand-shaking, back-slapping politician was running against him.

Through it all he maintained the dignity and honor of his office. He never asked for favors; therefore he was never under obligations to favor anyone. YOUNG and old respected him and his opinions.

There is a certain Mayor who attends to the financial affairs of his city as though they were his own. Taxpayers can see the improved streets, the bridges, the street lights, the good schools, the health precautions, the relief work that goes on during hard times or calamities. They can see it with the naked eye. They do not have to read reports to find out where their tax money goes.

When he stands on a school platform and talks to the boys and girls they listen. They may not carry out all his suggestions, but what he says goes home.

When they grow old enough to vote they march right up to the polls with their Mas and Pas and vote for that same Mayor.

Once I knew a teacher who made a practice of knocking his pupils on the head with books, rapping their legs with his blackboard pointer or otherwise venting his spleen upon those tormentable boys. They were all afraid of him except one. And this is what that fourteen-year-old boy told me:

"He never has hit me and I do more to aggravate him than any boy in the room. I'd knock him cold if he ever hit me."

"Did you tell him so?" I asked.

"No. But he knows better than to try it."

That boy's contempt for his teacher made of him a ring-leader in all the mischief that its active brain could contrive. The teacher was not only a bully, but he was afraid. Nobody could expect those boys to respect that man's authority.

You can assert your authority and lay down the law until you are black in the face, but, unless your speech, your deeds, your sense of honor and justice are such that you COMMAND the respect of your children, it is futile to DEMAND deference or obedience.

Boys and girls need a firm hand to guide them. They are willing to obey people who are strong enough to win obedience and just enough to warrant loyalty. Weakness or indulgence on the part of parents, teachers or guardians neither gains their affection nor their good opinion.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND.

CONSIDER, my Daughter, the frank talk of woman. For, she that becometh a wife, must all her days be a guardian to a human being, whom she permitteth to treat her like a moron!

Lo, whether she weddeth a man ten years her junior or twenty years her senior, she "taketh a BOY to raise."

Go to. When a damsel becometh a full-grown woman she putteth away childish things. But all the days of his life, a man goeth ON playing games! Yea, even until the last breath and the last dose of medicine!

For, wether it be love or war, business or politics, romance or work, whatsoever a man doeth, it is always a GAME to him!

Behold, there is a "boy" in the heart of every man, that maketh him to struggle into the bleachers at the baseball game, and to disport himself as a wild Indian, yelling and flinging his hat in the air.

Yea, it is the boy in every man that maketh him to tell "fish-stories" and to boast of his athletic feats, and to lie about his golf score.

It is the boy beneath his dignity, that maketh him rejoice in parades and to array himself in gold fringes and Masonic aprons that he may display himself before the multitude.

It is the boy in his heart beneath his staid waistcoat, that causeth him to long for a woman's shoulder wheron to lay his head and hide his face, when he is cast down and

It is the "boy" within him, that urgeth him to mischief and prompteth him to sneak sweets from the refrigerator and to delight in stolen kisses and forbidden pastimes.

And she that seeketh to bind a man to her, will bind her eyes to his little weaknesses and refrain from chastising him for his boyish follies.

Yea, she will let him out to play, nor crab his games with reproaches.

She will fasten the feathers upon his head, and pin the medals on his chest and make circles about him, crying, "Hail to the Big Chief! Hoh, the Conquering Hero approacheth!"

For, verily, verily, she knoweth that to treat him as a full-grown human being is folly. For, at ninety-and-nine, he shall still be a thing of beauty and a boy, forever!

Oh, wonderful, thrice-blessed Man, who never GROWETH UP!

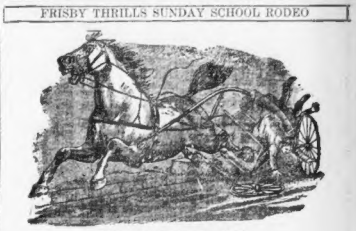
FRISBY THRILLS SUNDAY SCHOOL RODEO



Frisbie reaches for the wheel.

CHAPTER VI

THE scene shifts from the Sunday school picnic. Then it shifts back to the Sunday school picnic.

Mrs. Frisby is pouring the coffee. Her husband, a garland of wild flowers on his brow, is cutting up. My mother—then a child of nineteen, in the full bloom of her youth—has, in the spirit of fun, pinned a piece of paper on Mr. Frisby. He is unaware that the paper bears the legend—

Please Kick Me

Everyone is giggling, of course.

Mr. Frisby, who at that time was Sunday school superintendent, though handsome, conceives the idea of getting down on his hands and knees behind an old lady. His plan was to have someone give the old lady a sudden shove, so she would go tumbling backward over him.

Mrs. Frisby, at this moment, happened to see her husband, and in a fit of jealous rage, gave him a resounding kick. Whether she actually ready the eloquent plea pinned upon his trousers by my mother, is still a mute question in Sunday school circles.

However—

WORCESTER SALES HEAD FOR OAKLAND MOTOR CO.

The Worcester branch of the Oakland Motor Company of New England announces the appointment of Lewis B. Clay as sales manager. This appointment was necessary, due to the tremendously increased volume of business on the Oakland All-American Six and the Pontiac Six in the Worcester territory.

Mr. Clay has been favorably known in Worcester and vicinity, as well as to the entire automobile trade in New England. He has been closely connected with the automobile industry for the past eleven years. He served as office manager for a Buick tire house for some time and for the past six years has been president and general manager of the Hassler-New England Company, with jurisdiction over the New England States and New York State.

He introduced the Hassler straddliger throughout this territory with phenomenal success. Being a graduate of a mechanical engineering college, he has a thorough understanding of the mechanical phase of the business.

PICK N.E. MAN ON HOOVER SURVEY

Washington, Feb. 11 (AP)—A committee of industrial leaders and economists was appointed today by Secretary Hoover to take charge of the survey of economic changes in the United States.

Funds amounting to $150,000 have been privately obtained for the enterprise and the Bureau of Economic Research at New York will perform the work.

Under Mr. Hoover's chairmanship the committee will include Walter S. Gifford, assistant Secretary of Commerce; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John Lawrence, president of the New England Council; Max Mason, president of the University of Chicago; Wesley C. Mitchell, governor of the Federal Reserve Board; Lewis E. Pierson, president of the Johnson Corporation of the United States; John J. Raskob, vice-president of the General Motors Corporation; Owen D. Young, Chicago, and Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad; George McFadden, Philadelphia; Clarence M. Woolley, New York city, and Owen D. Young, New York.

E. E. Hunt has been designated secretary of the first meeting called for Feb. 21 in New York.

AUTOIST FACES COURT IN INJURY OF TWO CHILDREN

George E. Stacho, 28, of Groton street, Hingham, whose automobile injured two children during the South Baptist Church fire in South Boston Saturday in a crash which in South Boston court today charged with operating to endanger the safety of the public. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to next Friday. Held in bail at $500. The injured children were Florence McSparron, 8, and her brother Robert, 11. MR. AND MRS. MORSE SAIL FOR TRINIDAD

Mr. and Mrs. Erving P. Morse of 155 Bay State rd., sailed yesterday from New York on the steamship St. George for Trinidad, British West Indies, where they will spend several weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Samuel J. Calvert.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvert have resided in Trinidad since their wedding last June.

bergh's, a great tribute to French airplane construction.

"Flaming Youth," dancing, drinking and shooting, worries other countries also. Lawyers from Japan, France and Britain are watching a Berlin murder trial. Hans Kranz, aged nineteen, helped his young friend Scheller, and Scheller's sister, Hildegard, to pass an evening pleasantly with dancing, tobacco and much drink. Hildegard, only sixteen, smuggled a friend, Otto Stephan, into her bedroom and Hans, attached to Hildegard, told the girl's brother he ought to kill Stephan. He did it, then killed himself.

The question is, did Kranz commit murder when he told his friend, "Avenge your sister's honor, by killing the man?"

Kaisers, Emperors, Sultans are not what they were. Berlin hisses the former Kaiser, appearing in a moving picture. Germans have not forgotten the Kaiser's bragging, drinking officers that kicked young German recruits on slight provocation, slapped their faces, called them pigs, and crowded off the sidewalk "common citizens," that paid for the army.

Constantinople sees a moving picture called "Abdul Hamid, The Red Sultan," showing methods and crimes of the last of their Sultans. "It is much enjoyed by modern Turks wearing the derby hat instead of the fez.

The "Red Sultan's" thirteen exiled children made a futile effort to have the film seized by a Paris Court.

Sandino, Nicaragua's energetic bandit leader, tells British residents not to be frightened. He is only "after the Yankees." American Marines can't fight, says he, and when he meets them "blood will flow."

Sandino's band of 150 ought to be persuaded, as kindly as possible, that their plan, to wipe out by violence a treaty between Nicaragua's Government and the United States, will not be successful.

STATE AND BAUER IN ROW AGAIN OVER DOGS

Frank B. Cummings, director of the state division of animal industry, and Mayor Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn, are again engaged in a wordy war over Lynn's dog tax.

This time the dispute arises over the failure of Lynn officials to report to Dist. Atty. William G. Clark of Essex county, as directed by the statutes, whether a warrant for the police calling for the killing of unlicensed and uncollared dogs was issued and executed.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

FINE CONCERT PROGRAM OVER WLOE

The WLOE Concert Ensemble, a weekly feature maintained by the New England Broadcasting Company, will commence tomorrow's radio program from the Boston Evening American-Daily Advertiser studio at 12:15 noon, with an hour's program of semi-classical music, of which the outstanding numbers are a Spanish suite of Lacome.

At 1:15 Birge Peterson will start a half-hour program of organ music from the State Theater, and at 1:45 late news bulletins will be issued by the Boston Daily Advertiser.

At 2:05 Moses Smith, music critic of the Boston Evening American, will give a piano description of the afternoon's program to be played by the People's Symphony Orchestra at Jordan Hall. The concert itself will be put on the air by WLOE direct from the hall at 2:30.

Tomorrow's People's Symphony program is devoted to Wagnerian music, with Elsie Baker Bankell, soprano, and Henry Jackson Warren, baritone, as assisting soloists.

The orchestra, under the direction of William F. Hofmann, will play the following program:

Prelude to "The Meistersinger."

Aria and Recit. (Act III), "Ride of Wotan's Farewell, from "Die Walkure," Henry Jackson Warren, soloist.

Ride of the Valkyrs.

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin."

Aria, Act II, "Tannhauser," Blanche Hanbell, soloist.

Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde."

Overture from "Tannhauser."

The WLOE program will resume at 9:10 p. m. with a recital of songs by Leah Wade, soprano, and Robert Bendt, baritone, assisted by Mary Low, accompanist.

Leo Vartanian, pianist and composer, will play a half-hour of classics and his own works from 10 to 10:30; followed by a half-hour of songs by Edgar Isherwood, tenor, and Advertiser news at 11.

LINCOLN TALK OVER WLOE TONIGHT

The Boston Evening American Thoughtful Half Hour will be conducted at Station WLOE tonight by Rev. W. Quay Roselle, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Malden. This period, which is arranged by the Church Department of the American, is given from 7 to 7:30 every Saturday night. Tonight's topic chosen by Dr. Roselle for his talk will be "When Lincoln Has Come to Life." During this period, there will be songs by Miss Edith Wayne Wilson, soprano, of Melrose.

There will be a half-hour studio program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

Scotch and Irish airs will be played by Ed Holmes, Scottish dulcimerist, and Tom McCartney, accordionist, assisted by Ida Fraser, soprano, commencing at 8 p. m.

At 9 o'clock, the Henrys and Company will present a miscellaneous program featuring Margaret and Margaret Henry, Dorothy Ahearne, pianist; Isabel Harris O'Keefe, Esther Plaisted Wright, sopranos; Robert S. Andrews, tenor; Frances Merrick, violinist; Marion Fowler, Hortense Wood, Gladys King and Elizabeth James, pianist.

Sound song program will be given by Alice J. Dalton, soprano, at 10 o'clock. At 10:15 the Roseland Ballroom orchestra will commence a 45 minute dance program, following which come Boston Sunday Advertiser News Bulletins at 11, and the State Ballroom orchestra from 11:10 to midnight.

B. U. GROUP OFF ON WINTER SPORT PARTY

With ski truppings, skates, and snowshoes all packed up, a group of Boston University students, mostly from students left town bound for Shattuck Inn, Jaffrey, N. H., where they will spend the week-end on their annual winter sport party.

Skiing and skating will be the order of the day, and several theater parties, and story telling have been arranged for the evenings at the Inn.

The committee for the party is headed by John Frawley of Newton, assisted by Superintendent of Brookline and Thomas Brogan of Reading.

CLARA BOW WILL BE OPERATED ON SUNDAY

Los Angeles, Feb 11—Clara Bow, the fiery-haired "It" girl, is to be operated on tomorrow in a local hospital for appendicitis, according to plans made known.

"I'm not scared—but it's a new part and I'm just a little bit nervous," Miss Bow said.

MANY ATTEND MARTHA LEE LUNCHEON

One hundred and sixty-five members of the Martha Lee Women's Club and School of Practical Cookery enjoyed their first get-together luncheon at the Hotel Statler.

A feature of the luncheon was the musical program arranged by Madame Myrtle H. Lombard of West Somerville, and readings by Winifred Pettit Scott. Mrs. Virginia Denny-Bergfeld, soprano, sang "Agnes Dei," "In a Monastery Garden" and "Song of India," accompanied by the Crinoline Trio composed of Dorothy Baxter, Adelina Fitch, 'cello, and Lilyan Jay, pianist. This trio rendered several instrumental and vocal selections.

Mrs. Scott's readings were particularly enjoyed. She is a regular contributor to the Women's Club programs from Station WLOE.

Sous-Chef Bronner, of the Hotel Statler, catered to the luncheon. Members who have profited by the lessons in the Martha Lee Kitchen of Practical Cookery conducted the party through the huge immaculate kitchens of the Statler.
